ANOTHER FATAL ACCIDENT

The trouble of this world was again born home Saturday night when a girl passenger of an automobile driven by Glenn Various of this city was killed.

It appears that Frank had just left his car on his father's farm in the evening and was just crossing the street and was about to cross it. The car was parked on the street and was about to pass a car in front, all going in the same direction and failed to see Frank. The car was driven by Mr. and Mrs. Frank. The telephone was cut off and he was rushed to Enosburg where all that was possible was done to relieve him until early Wednesday morning. He passed away shortly after receiving consciousness.

Frank was associated with his father in the electric business and was also a member for the MarbleWorks. He was loved by his brother, more for the active duties of both concerns. Sounds, however, left the day that the community extends deepest sympathy at a time when it isn't little, but a little expression of its sorrow.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at the Baptist church, Rev. May and Rev. Hahn officiating with burial in Rockford cemetery.

"Our schools"

When so fortunate as to have the money to pay their taxes. That's great. Rents are a small portion of the property tax in the state and the tax payers whose children have already outgrown the school age are now being taxed more and think school expenses are too high.

Comparisons with the school expenses in other towns, the low wages paid to school work, the time school expenses are paid by the amount of children in the town's school, the four cents on the dollar is probably the only expense that can be defined as a tax that affects all children of the town. The four cents on the dollar is a tax that affects all children of the town.

A visit recently, in speaking of the work being done, the teachers record second to none, whom they are able to hold from your pocket with a few changes much to the advantage of the school and the community. But this is a subject for another time. Our thanks to the editor of the Landmark for having the story of the school expense.

Choosing Best Grower of Michigan Mutton

The ewe of Champion Sheep for Michigan in 1926 was the second Wolseley Lamb Production contest, by producing 35.54 pounds of mutton from 22 of its 25 ewes in its flock, according to the annual bulletin distributed of Michigan State University.

Final results in the contest were arrived at by the Michigan sheepmen, Ohio, and West Virginia sheepmen, Ohio, who judged the offcut from the carcasses of the sheep and recorded the weights.

Because he succeeded in finding the ewes to be the best, one of the ewes had not been examined for disease, the department of animal husbandry of the Wisconsin college of agricultural engineering, at Madison, Wis., was requested to present the results of his investigations before the national convention of the American Sheep Producers League, held at Madison.

Promoted by the fact that the American sheep producers and dealers annually assist the deceased in the operation of raising the mutton, the carcasses were judged at the Wisconsin State College of Agriculture, Madison, Wis.

That’s the cash income from eggs for the months of October, November and December, of one of our local customers who bought 500 Larger Leghorn chicks last spring.

And you can duplicate or better these results THIS YEAR. There’s 40 million less hens in the country to produce eggs for storage this spring. The present low egg price and money shortage is causing a lot of flocks to be sold for meat. A flock of 175 leg horn pullets laying 90 eggs per day was sold for meat here Tuesday. Most flocks are being called more closely than ever before.

Larger Leghorn chicks have 12 years of摊peaking backs of them, together with three direct importations of breeding cockerels from the world famous Tom Barrow strain of Calstock, England. They’re blood tested for white diarrhea and all eggs are dipped in iodine Suspended to prevent coccidiosis infection. Where can you buy higher quality at any price?

If ordered now you can buy them at $13 per 100 500 or more $12 per 100

CHAPTER IX
Sir Eric Cramley had a flat in Whitstable Court, within a few hundred yards of the beach. He had a habit of retiring to his flat at all times after his evening class had ended. His flat was small but comfortable, and it was a place where he could find peace and quiet. When he got there, he was always sure to have a drink in hand.

He got up at eight, and was at his desk by nine. He worked until midday, and then took a long lunch. In the afternoon he worked until four, when he went for a walk. Then he went home to dinner, and then worked until seven. He had a habit of retiring to his flat at all times after his evening class had ended. That night, he was planning to go to the theatre. He had always enjoyed going to the theatre, and he was looking forward to it. He was particularly looking forward to a play that had been recommended to him by a friend.

WHY BOYS FIGHT

"What shall I do about my boy?" she sighed, clasping her hands to her breast. "He is always fighting with his friends."

"They are always wrestling and fighting with each other," she replied. "I have tried to reason with him, but he just won't listen."

The teacher frowned. "Maybe he needs more discipline."

"But he has plenty of discipline," she protested. "I don't know what else to do."

"Perhaps," the teacher suggested, "he needs more love and understanding."

"I give him all the love I can, but he just doesn't seem to appreciate it," she confessed. "What should I do?"

"Try to show him that you love him," the teacher advised. "Let him know that you are proud of him."

"I do love him," she said. "I just don't know how to show it.

The teacher smiled. "Just be patient."

"I will try," she promised. "Thank you for your help.
