LOCAL BREVITIES

Ed Doe visited Mrs. Doe in Port Huron Sunday.

"Porcelain Cups," a new serial starts in this issue.

Bonnabelle Styles visited friends in Chicago last week.

Fred Grove has improved his home with a new porch.

The Community Aid will meet with Mrs. Homer Connerly next Wednesday.

Cleone Churchill was a member of the graduating class at Butterworth hospital last week.

Marjorie Gilchrist is home from her school work at Bronson. She will return there next year.

Mrs. Curtiss and Bob, jr. left Sunday for a visit with relatives at Capac. Barbara and Jimmy will return with them.

As Chicago schools close this week we look for a goodly number of our summer people very soon. We will surely be glad to welcome them.

Mrs. Mable Parks and Harry Bingham are on a tour of the east where they will visit Washington, New York and other places of interest.

Evelyn Nash of the class of 1926 of Gobles, graduated last evening in the nurses training course at George Washington University. Her many friends here will be pleased at her advancement.

The annual school meeting passed off very quietly here Monday night with about 50 present and voting. Fred Starks and Carson Rendel were elected trustees. Minutes will be published in full later.

Ethel Beeman, who came to the Gobles school too late to take the semester took the county examinations for the eighth grade. She received her diploma at Paw Paw last Monday. She is only 13 years old.

The ladies of the M. E. church will serve a "penny a spoonful" supper in their basement Friday evening, June 17, beginning at 5:30 until all are served. The public is invited to come and bring their pennies.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Miller and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller left Monday for California where the latter will attend the Olympic games and the former plan to spend the winter with their daughter, Ruth.

Mr. Fry and Mrs. Beck attended the Van Buren and Allegan county Soldiers and Sailors Reunion at Scott lake Saturday and report a good attendance and fine program. There were only nine Civil war soldiers present.

Mrs. Fairfield and Mr. and Mrs. Davis have moved to their house west of the Community church which they recently remodelled. Glad to have them in this home as they will improve the grounds and add much to the appearance of the street.

"As I am writing this column at five-thirty Tuesday morning" quoted from Harold Spicer's 'Thinking Out Loud.' Strikes us that he was drawing on his imagination instead of thinking. Who could believe that our friend Hal would be thinking at this early hour?

Covey Hill Roundup at the church starting next Wednesday evening at 7:30 and continuing, evenings only, for balance of the week. This is a young peoples' conference with outside speakers of worth. All are urged to attend as young people, regardless of age.

The Dixie station has taken on a new coat of paint. With this improvement, the many added beauties of the Wolverine grounds and the beautiful park and grounds at the Shell station we are more than proud of our filling stations. Walter Ruell has also improved the plot in the rear of his store.

Pauline First had the misfortune to break her collar bone.

Dick Greenhoe of Grand Rapids is visiting his cousin, Chuck Taylor.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Horn of Indianapolis were week end guests at D. M. Gilchrist's.

Paul Brown and family of Lowell were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Graham

Dr. and Mrs. Wilkinson are visiting in Detroit and will not return until next week Friday.

The Past Noble Grand club will have a pot luck dinner with Mrs. Will Ferguson next Tuesday.

Herb VanDuren and his Club orchestra at Barber's next Wednesday night. If you like music don't miss this orchestra.

Its picnic time at Barber's and seldom a day passes that some party is not enjoying the privileges of this popular amusement place.

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Johnson, Mrs. H. E. Tanner and Hubert Allen of Mancelona are visiting at the home of Charles Petty this week.

Van Ryno has installed a new fountain in his yard that is attracting much attention. It is built up of stone in a very unique manner.

Children's day exercises were held at both churches Sunday with programs that were a credit to the children and the committees in charge.

Base Line took a beating at the hands of the Battle Creek team Sunday. A new lineup will play the K. of C. team from Kalamazoo next Sunday.

Adrian Ryno has rented the old post office building and plans to be operating Saturday with an attractive line of radios and electric appliances.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hill and Mr. and Mrs. George Bensinger of Grand Rapids ate Sunday dinner with the latter's sister, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Goodeve of Gobles

Gobles Graduates

We have secured the records of Gobles graduates from the school and plan to publish same with what data we can learn from time to time. This list extends only back to 1894 so we will prelude that date with a few of those who attended before commencements were in vogue here.

In connection with this series we will appreciate brief sketches of former Gobles students that will give us something of what they have accomplished, and at the close we will appreciate your comments as to whom has achieved most in his chosen life's work.

Some have failed to keep in touch with us and so many of our reports will be meager but with your help we will do our best.

Prof. Herron's promotion gave us an excellent start for this series and of his day we cannot neglect the Myers family that gave us George, the politician; Charles the preacher; Arvin, the druggist; Frank, the doctor; Calvin, the undertaker; Edwin, the clerk and Rolla the civil service man. As far as we know they were the only Gobles boys in these particular professions prior to 1894 and their successes are better known to most of our readers than to us.

Later came Harry M. Huff, a successful attorney of Portland, Ore. We believe he too has the distinction of being the only Gobles boy in his profession even to the present time.

Teaching and housekeeping and farming seem to predominate as the choice for Gobles students and no school produces better, and few indeed are they, in any sphere, of whom we are not justly proud.

Unless we learn of others of the older school, our next article will begin with the class of 1894.

We are ready for your job work. Bring it in today.

KENDALL

Guy Waber of Kalamazoo spent Sunday with his sister, Mrs. Jessie Parker and family.

Anna Ray of Coldwater was home to spend Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Ray. She bought a Ford car at Allegan while here.

SUCKERS, TROUT COMPETITORS FOR SAME FOOD

The sucker does not eat trout eggs, its young do provide food for trout, and both species are competitors for the same food.

These are the conclusions reached by the Institute for Fisheries Research in a report given the Department of Conservation.

A female sucker recently taken from a rainbow trout spawning bed on the Pere Marquette river was examined by Dr. Carl L. Hubbs, director of the institute. The fish was found to be filled with eggs and was ready to spawn when she was taken.

No trout eggs or indication of trout eggs were found in the sucker's stomach.

"This negative evidence is in harmony with other evidence obtained by us to date," Dr. Hubbs said in his report. The stomach contents of the fish showed at least 90 per cent larvae and pupae. A few small clams were included as well as some sucker eggs and a considerable amount of sand.

"These food items are also eaten by trout. There can be no doubt that suckers and trout compete for food in trout streams. Whether the benefit of suckers furnishing fry and fingerlings for trout to eat offsets this damage cannot be answered until a larger number of specimens have been studied," the report concludes.

County Doctor Jobs Go Begging in Cheboygan

Cheboygan has five county offices that nobody wants. The time limit for filing bids for the position of county physician in charge of indigent poor in each of five districts was reached yesterday, but not a single bid was turned in.

Officers say the probable reason is a resolution adopted by the Northern Michigan Medical society condemning the system of contracting medical care of poor people.

The society favored letting poor patients go to the doctor of their choice.

GIANT AZTEC BEAN

The above illustration was reproduced from an actual photograph, to show the comparative size of the Giant Aztec Bean with that of the common field or navy bean.

LARGEST OF ALL BEANS

It is a real bean; looks like a field or navy bean except that it is 1/2 or 3 times as large. 18 or 20 Giant Aztec beans usually weigh an ounce, while it takes from 160 to 170 of the common field beans to weigh an ounce. It is a bush bean; will stand more drought than most varieties; very hardy; and probably the most productive bean grown. One planter reports that two years ago he secured four bushels, the product of which he replanted last spring, and in the fall harvested 240 pounds of dry beans. The quality of the Giant Aztec Bean is unexcelled both as a green and dry shell bean. Our supply of seed is limited, and the price is high, but now is the time to get started with this wonderful bean. 8 beans, 25c; 40 beans, $1.00; 100 beans, $2.00, postpaid.

WOULD COMBINE MECOSTA LAKES

Flooding of eight Mecosta county lakes into one, 2,000 acres in extent, is the project before the Chippewa Fish and Game club. The purpose is to improve duck feeding grounds and fishing facilities.

The plan has been approved by the state conservation department but needs action by the board of supervisors. The state owns nearly half the land to be flooded and the majority of property owners have expressed favor with the project.

The big lake would be formed by damming the south branch of Chippewa river. The lakes to be joined are Upper and Lower Evans, Big Evans, Diamond, the two Saddle Backs, Boon and Tubbs. The acreage of these lakes now is 700.

The project would form the largest lake in this region, except Houghton. It would cover 800 more acres than Chippewa lake, the largest one in Mecosta county at present.

"Wolf" Pack Found to Be Wild Dog Trio

Recent discovery that what was believed to be a wolf pack working in the vicinity of Escanaba was a group of wild dogs illustrates a contention long made that many stories of wolf depredations have their foundation in the activities of renegade dogs, according to the division of field administration of the conservation department.

The fact that there are some timber wolves in the upper peninsula has caused persons suffering loss of livestock to blame these animals while wolves probably only infrequently are to blame.

Recent raids on livestock near Escanaba caused residents to attribute the damages to wolves. Trappers were engaged to remove the animals. One of the members of the "wolf pack" proved to be a wild Eskimo dog preying on young deer, calves and cows. Two other wild dogs, still at large, are reported to be an Airdale and a Police.

Conservation officers are assisting in trying to catch the last two remaining members of the "pack."

Resurrection Plant

The Genuine "Rose of Jericho"

These peculiar plants are found among the pines and cedars of Palestine. When you get the plant it will have the appearance of a ball of tightly folded leaflets, dry and dead. Put it in water and it will open up its handsome fern-like foliage, turn green and begin to grow in about twenty minutes. Take it out of the water and it curls up, turns brown and becomes dead again. It is capable of apparently dying and coming to life again repeatedly, and will keep in its dead or dormant state for years and reawaken directly upon being placed in water. It is an interesting, curious and most beautiful house plant with fine fern-like leaves of very agreeable fragrance. If you want a "table fern" that will prove satisfactory under all conditions, don't fail to get one of these marvels of plant life. Grows and thrives in a shallow bowl of water, and is greatly admired by everyone.

Must Not Make Paper Until 1937, Order to Hopper

Some time ago Bertrand Hopper sold his paper interests in Kalamazoo, Mich., to the Western Tablet and Stationery Company, which concern had taken over seven different paper companies, including the Hopper interests.

Since that time Mr. Hopper established the Hopper Paper Company and the Sangamon Company at Taylorville, Ill. A complaint was lodged with the United States District Court at Grand Rapids, Mich., by the Western Tablet company, setting up a claim that Hopper had promised not to enter into competition with the new corporation, but had violated the agreement in the establishment of his Taylorville concerns.

The court has just rendered its decision, which by injunction permanently restrains Hopper from direct or indirect activity in the manufacture or sale of any form of paper which was manufactured prior to January 3, 1927, by any of the seven companies which were taken over by the combine. The injunction extends to February 9, 1937.

Zeeland C. of C. Elects Officers

The Zeeland Chamber of Commerce was formally organized recently with the election of officers and directors and the adoption of a constitution. The proposed constitution was amended to provide for the election of the board of directors in such a manner that one member from each of the retail, manufacturing and civic departments to serve for a term of three years, two for a term of two years and one for a period of one year.

The following officers were elected: President, John H. DePree; vice presidents, A. DeKruif, D. J. DePree and M. B. Rogers; treasurer, C. J. DenHerder; secretary, G. J. Van Hoven.

Directors are J. H. DePree, Angus DeKruif, G. J. VanHoven, representing the retail group; manufacturing group, D. J. DePree, Joe Chamberlain, George Caball; civic group, C. J. DenHerder, M. B. Rogers and Fred Kieft.

The chamber of commerce plans to take immediate action on three projects at once in regard to the hatchery advertising service, postal service in this city and tax reduction.

Maple Sugar Yield Half of Last Year's

The value of the Michigan maple crop this year declined to $180,000, compared with $358,000 in 1931, according to an inventory by the Michigan crop reporting service.

In this state, 467 trees that were tapped netted 33,000 pounds of sugar valued at $8,000 and 98,000 gallons of syrup valued at $172,000. Last year production amounted to 73,000 pounds of sugar and 150,000 gallons of syrup.

Takes Over Post of Ionia Fair Treasury

Teller Leo McAlary of the National Bank of Ionia has been elected treasurer of the Ionia Free Fair association, to succeed Jesse H. Smith, resigned because of poor health. McAlary announces this bank, which has given away three bulls each year for several years in order to encourage interest in the country 4-H club work, this year will give away four heifers—two Guernseys, one Jersey and one Holstein, all purebreds.

Nearly 6,000 Inmates Of Jackson Prison Now

With the arrival of inmates from the Detroit House of Correction, the Michigan state prison count at Jackson reached 5,891, a new high record. The Detroit inmates were transferred in busses under an escort of state police headed by Capt. Ira Marmon. Most of the men transferred were short term offenders.

CIVICS REQUIREMENT IN STATE SCHOOLS

Introduction of a civics course in the curriculum of all schools and normal colleges in Michigan will be made this fall.

The new course, provided by action of the legislature, will be compulsory in all grade and high schools of the state, normal colleges and the Michigan State College of Mining and Technology. The statute exempts Michigan State College and the University of Michigan.

Legislative action on the course was the result of a year's study by a special committee representing the Michigan Education association. The law prohibits graduation until the course has been completed.

Sports Courses at U. Of M. This Summer Are Interesting

Four outstanding teachers of physical education for women will give an intensive course in the playing and coaching of hockey, tennis, golf and swimming for women at the University of Michigan Summer Session, Dean Edward H. Kraus announces. Similar courses for men have been held for a number of years and the growing demand on the part of teachers of women's athletics, camp counselors and sport enthusiasts has led to the new courses this year. The short course will last from June 20 to July 4.

Mrs. Stewart Hanley, three times women's golf champion of Michigan, will teach this sport which is increasingly popular with women. Swimming will be taught by Mrs. Nita Sheffield, of Teachers' College, Columbia University, tennis by Elizabeth Beall, of Wellesley College, and hockey by Hilda V. Burr, now on the Michigan faculty, who, since coming from England in 1922, has been a leader in making hockey one of the most popular college and school games. Instruction will center around the Michigan Union Swimming pool, the new university 18 hole golf course and the three official hockey fields and sixteen tennis courts adjacent to the Women's Athletic building.

Jackson to Economize On Street Lighting

As a means of checking up on the alleged overuse of street lights, City Commissioners J. C. O'Neill, W. D. Hunt and S. E. Lewis, members of the committee on parks and lighting, with C. R. Clarke, city electrical inspector at the wheel, drove 40 miles over city streets. At the completion of the tour, Commissioner Hunt states that recommendations probably will be returned to the commission. An appropriation of $63,100 has been made in the budget for street lighting next year, and the removal of each light would mean a saving of $45, according to the electrical inspector.

New Relief Scheme Proposed in Kazon

An appropriation of $7,907.66 for the establishment of Kalamazoo's new Welfare department has been made by the city commission. George E. Martin, former city commissioner, has been made superintendent, and the unemployment relief work formerly taken care of by the Civic League is to be administered by the city. The Civic League will look after social and welfare cases under the new relief plan.

H. T. Ewald Elected to Head Advertising Men

At its annual meeting held in Washington, D. C., on April 16, the American Association of Advertising Agencies elected H. T. Ewald of Detroit chairman of the board of directors. This is said to be the highest honor that can be conferred on an advertising agency executive.

50,000 Ford Workers to Produce Own Vegetables

Ford workers, in all plants operated by the company, have started the cultivation of garden plots adjacent to the factories in which they are employed. It is estimated that some 50,000 gardens in the Detroit area will be producing food stuffs this summer for the use of individual Ford workers' families.

This project, fostered by Henry Ford personally, is referred to as the "balanced work and food production plan."

"Everybody," says Mr. Ford, "will be better off if the workers devote part of the time, saved by mass production of machines and other products of industry, to producing their own food—they will be healthier and happier and by producing a large share of their food at wholesale costs by their own labor the reduced earnings due to shorter hours will be offset. The dollar goes almost twice as far anyway at present," he added.

It was announced at the automobile plant that several thousand acres have been placed at the disposal of the company by subdividers. The Ford company put tractors to work at once to mark off the boundaries of the separate gardens.

Each plot will be about 40 feet wide and 100 feet deep, or enough ground, it is estimated, to yield a year's supply of vegetables for a family.

Five thousand cards were distributed in one department of the River Rouge plant. Of those returned, 779 workers said that they already had gardens, and 1,464 asked that land be assigned them. On this return the company estimated that 50,000 gardens will be operated by its employees this summer.

The Slaughter of the Stocks

As an instance of how far market prices of the stocks of industrial companies have become out of proportion to company assets it was stated that in the middle of May that 82 cents invested in the stock of Nash Motors Co. bought $1 in cash and United States Government obligations. In addition, its proportion of all other assets, totaling around $12,000,000, including severely written down plant and equipment, is thrown in free.

At market price of $10 a share for the company's capital stock, the entire concern could be purchased for $27,800,000. As of February 29, 1932, cash and government securities alone totaled $33,400,000.

At the recent low of $9 a share for the stock, one dollar in cash and government securities could be purchased for 73 cents, with plant, equipment, etc., a gift. At that time market valuation was $24,600,000.

Despite current depressed conditions in the automobile industry, Nash is still on a profitable basis.

POPULAR MECHANICS HANDBOOK FOR FARMERS

Here's "the most remarkable book ever published for farmers," says one authority. It is remarkable in the extreme practical nature of its contents, in the wide range of farm subjects covered, in the world of illustrations it contains, and in its extremely low price.

861 Discoveries

One discovery sometimes makes a fortune, there are 861 of them, any one of which may be of many dollars value to you. These discoveries may be classified as follows:

100 for the farm shop	7 on greenhouse
10 on farm tools	20 on garden work
10 on auto, truck, and tractor	10 on poultry
10 on farm buildings	10 on the lawn
10 on farm machinery	10 on household hints
10 on farm implements	10 on miscellaneous
10 on orchard work	10 on hunting, fishing, and trapping
10 on farm stock

Send every plan has been tested and found to be successful. Most of the articles are illustrated with photographs or drawings. The device described by each is made because of these pictures and clear descriptions.

643 Illustrations

Suppose you could live your life 417 times

How you could have ahead of other farmers in a way that would insure you liberty and plenty of money. This book enables you to do the next best thing—you may have the advantage of 417 lives—experience of successful farmers as told by themselves—briefly, clearly, completely. And many of these discoveries are illustrated with accurate drawings. Imagine 270 pages chock full of farm tips, hints, and ideas. Just think of the value to you!

JAPAN TRIP FOR BASEBALL TEAM OF "M" ASSURED

The University of Michigan baseball squad will leave San Francisco August 11 on a six-weeks tour of the east, during which the team will meet the University of Hawaii diamond squad and various teams of Japan, Coach Ray Fisher has announced.

Michigan, only moderately successful this season, will meet 15 or more teams during its tour of Japan and Honolulu. A series will be played against the University of Hawaii at Honolulu, but that will be the only stop for the party outside of Japan. Two years ago the Wolverine nine made a trip to Japan and won the majority of their games with the easterners.

Fisher's greatest difficulty this year has been in finding capable pitchers. In most of the games the hurling duties have been divided among a number of men, including McNeal, Wistert, Thompkins and McKay. It is probable that one or two freshmen pitchers will be taken on the Japan trip, if they are eligible at that time. Patchen and Hosler have appeared as promising material during the spring practice season of Coach Benny Oosterbaan's squad.

Upper Peninsula Concerns Active

Two more instances of the resumption of industrial activity in the upper peninsula were reported recently. The Ishpeming plant of the H. W. Gossard Company reports that 460 persons, mostly women, are now on the payroll and that operations have been stepped up from seven to nine hours a day. The Metro-Nite Products Company, which operates a quarry at Felch, Dickinson county, has resumed operations after a year's shut down. Several carloads of dolomite ore recently were shipped to the Milwaukee plant.

A Class in Gold Digging to Aid Colorado Unemployed

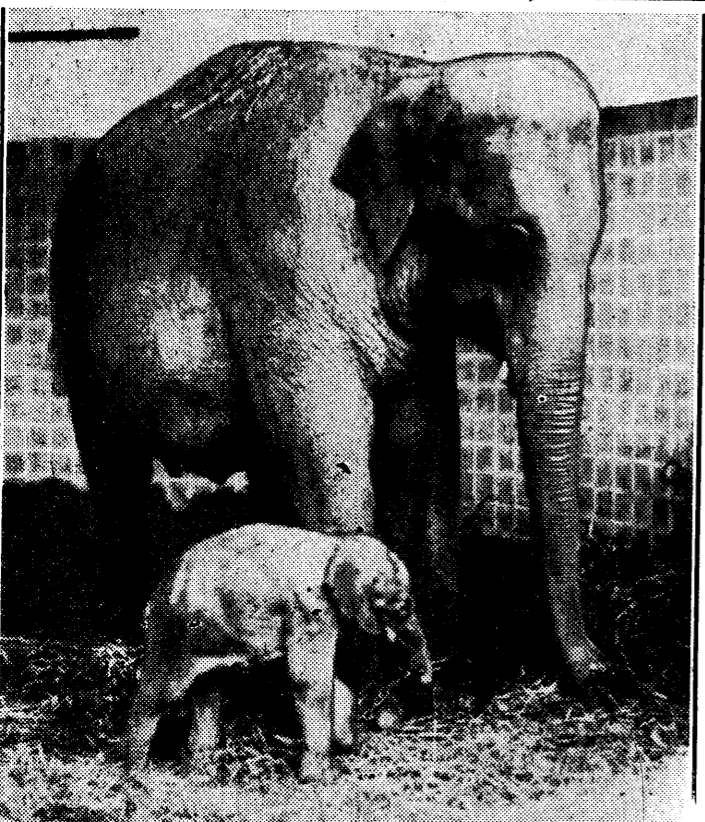

A unique remedy for unemployment is shown in this picture from Denver, Colo., where idle men and women are getting expert instruction in placer mining on the South Platte river, under municipal auspices. Fifteen hundred persons are enrolled in the classes, and while they may normally expect to secure only a dollar or two in gold each day, there is always the possibility of a lucky strike.

WILL ISSUE FARM OUTLOOK REPORTS

To aid farmers in planning production and marketing a series of summer "outlook" reports has been scheduled for issue in July, August and September by the bureau of agricultural economics of the United States department of agriculture.

Poultry and egg producers will be told July 25 the outlook for their industry during the following months as indicated by the current and prospective production and demand situation, the report to be based on information collected by the bureau's statistical research and markets staff.

The dairy outlook will be covered in a report to be issued July 28; the outlook for the sheep and lamb industry Aug. 1; beef cattle Aug. 22; fall grains Sept. 5; hogs Sept. 12, and feedstuffs Sept. 15. The combined reports will give a complete picture of the outlook for agriculture this fall and winter. The reports will be issued in time to enable farmers to plan their production and marketing.

Ten years ago it would have been impossible thus to guide farmers in their business operations because the basic statistical data were not then available; more can be done now because the bureau has gradually accumulated during the years much material needed in such a service.

Alfalfa Cures Best If Left in Windrow

One way for Michigan farmers to beat the rainmaker is to use the modern method of curing alfalfa in the windrow and at the same time secure a better quality of hay, according to the farm crops department at Michigan State College.

The Michigan alfalfa acreage increases more than 50,000 acres yearly, and any method which improves the quality of hay harvested adds thousands of dollars of feed values to this crop. The quality of alfalfa depends a great deal upon the proportion of leaves retained in the hay.

The old method of curing hay in cocks does not work well with alfalfa. The time needed for curing is greater, the danger of the hay becoming damaged by rain is increased, and more leaves are lost than in the windrow method of curing, which is recommended by the crops experts.

This method which enables growers to harvest large acreages economically and with the least danger of weather damage will be demonstrated in 15 counties below the Straits and in four Upper Peninsula counties. The dates for the meetings in lower Michigan have been set, but those for the Upper Peninsula will depend upon the rate of growth of alfalfa during the next few days.

The schedule, as announced, is: Berrien and Monroe, June 15; Oakland, June 17; Eaton, June 21; Gratiot and Oseola, June 22; Mecosta, June 23; St. Clair and Newaygo, June 24; Manistee, June 28; Alcona and Wexford, June 28, and Kalkaska, June 30. County agricultural agents will select the local farms where the meetings will be held. Members of the college crops department will be at each meeting to explain the curing methods used.

Hoppers Will Sing If Crops Are Gone

That perennial pest, the grasshopper, which harassed the Biblical fathers and which still sings among the ruins of the farmers' hopes, is due to destroy crops in many Michigan sections this year unless early control measures are used, according to the department of entomology at Michigan State College.

The hoppers have already been observed in Manistee and Muskegon counties and they undoubtedly are now present in other sections. Counties in the upper peninsula will have more than their share of the insect this year unless some unforeseen natural enemy cuts down their numbers.

The damage done by the insect can be stopped if poison bait is prepared and used before they become too large. The bait should be distributed as soon as all the insects have hatched. If different sized small hoppers can be found, the hatching is presumed to have been completed.

The poison bait can be prepared much more cheaply if enough to supply a community is mixed and then divided up among the group of farmers. County agricultural agents will supervise the mixing, is asked to do so. The bait should be mixed and spread with wooden paddles. Bran should be used for bait if it is possible, but sawdust can replace the bran and fair control obtained.

The formula for preparing the bait should be obtained from county agricultural agents or from the college entomology department at East Lansing. The poison should be spread thinly on headlands and along fence rows. The hoppers do not die immediately after eating the poison, but they immediately stop eating.

Wheat Dominates Agricultural Situation

"Wheat now begins to dominate the current agricultural situation," says the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, in its June 1 report. "The world supply situation has changed greatly within a year. Surplus producing countries in the southern hemisphere have worked their stocks of old wheat down to a total (as of mid-May) about 75,000,000 bushels less than a year ago.

Although stocks in North America," the bureau continues, "are approximately 38,000,000 bushels greater than a year ago, our probable crop of hard red wheat this year has been estimated at less than 240,000,000 bushels, which would be less than half that of last season. Hard red winter wheat comprises our chief wheat export. It is grown in the plains country from South Dakota to Texas. Stocks of native wheat in Europe are reported to be unusually low."

Regarding the general crop situation, the bureau says that "the growing season is progressing favorably over most of the country. The rains of last month brought out the pasture and range feed and gave meadows a more promising start. Nevertheless, certain of the early maturing crops are much smaller than last year's. The winter wheat prospect appears to be for a short crop. The southern potato crop is estimated at a little more than half that of last year. The early peach crop apparently will be the smallest in recent years. The south, after having replanted some of its cotton, corn and truck crops, is showing nearly normal seasonal progress. Generally speaking, cotton has made a fairly good start, although the eastern part of the belt has begun to feel some effects of dry weather."

Discussing trade movement of farm products, the bureau sees "the same sluggish tendency as characterizes many other commodities in these times. Low prices have not stimulated consumption, in many cases, as much as might be expected. For example, the consumption of butter, cheese and canned milk, in terms of milk equivalent, during the first four months of this year was one billion pounds less than a year ago. On the other hand, our exports of wheat and cotton in April were moderately heavy for that month."

The point is made by the bureau that the general level of prices received by farmers for their products has not changed greatly since the first of this year, and that with the unit purchasing power of farm products at about one-half what it was before the World war, "the problem of how farmers are to meet debts and fixed charges grows increasingly acute." The price index of farm products on May 15 was 56, and that of commodities bought by farmers, about 113. Farm wages are about 94.

Game Birds Eat Bugs

The Hungarian partridge, recently imported into lower Michigan, is not particularly harmful to crops, studies of 80 birds by the United States biological survey indicate.

In the fall and winter these birds feed largely on green leaves, grains of wheat, corn, oats, barley and seeds of ragweed, foxtail grass and bindweed. The cultivated grains seem to be picked up mostly in stubble fields and the investigators believe this indicates no injury to growing crops. The studies were made in all months of the year by Leon Kelso.

Contents of the crops and gizzards of the birds examined showed that animal food made up 6 per cent of their food. The young birds in particular displayed a liking for grasshoppers, beetles and other injurious insects.

This partridge has been introduced into numerous North American localities and has become well established in some of them, particularly in southwestern Canada, Washington, southwestern Wisconsin, southwestern Michigan and northwestern Ohio. As it is a comparatively new bird in this country its habits are interesting to sportsmen, ornithologists and farmers.

Urges More Care In Shipping Swine

The Michigan Livestock Loss Prevention association has appealed to farmers and shippers to handle their hogs with great care now in loading shipments to prevent losses in transit. "Our records show," said O. B. Price, secretary, "that more hogs die on their way to market in May than in any other month. Losses in June and July also have been above normal in the past."

The association cautioned farmers and shippers not to overexert hogs in taking them to market, not to overfeed before loading and not to overload. It advised using sand for bedding.

"Even though the market value of hogs is low," explained Secretary Price, "the loss of a single head on its way to market may be as serious financially as when hogs were selling for two or three times present prices. Hog losses last year increased 26 per cent over 1930. Swine losses have formed the bulk of livestock losses in the past."

POULTRY

CAUSE OF BLOOD CLOTS

"What causes blood clots in eggs and is there anything we can do to prevent them?" asks a reader. There isn't a thing that can be done about it, but since those eggs are as good as any others, with the little clot removed, one need not regard them as wasted. The clot is the result of the breaking of small blood vessels just as the yolk breaks loose from the sac that encloses it while it remains a part of the "egg cluster." Normally, this sac is ruptured at a line called the suture line, where no blood vessels cross, when the yolk is full formed and ready to pass into the oviduct where the white and shell are added at successive stages.

Sometimes a blood vessel lies out of place across the suture line, and breaks, depositing a drop of blood as the yolk passes through, and occasionally the sac breaks at another point than the suture line, where the amount of blood deposited is likely to be more than a drop or two, sometimes sufficient to color a large amount of the albumen. Blood clots or bloody albumen tend to make eggs spoil more quickly. Consumers are likely to regard them as unfit for use which is another good reason for culling them out.

CONTROL COCCIDIOSIS

One of the most effective ways to control coccidiosis, where the infection has been in the soil the previous year, requires the chicks to be kept in the brooder house until they are two and one-half to three months old. They are given only a small outside pen which has at least three inches of gravel on top of the soil, held in by boards at the base of the wire.

If germs get among chicks thus safeguarded, the next thing is to shut them in the house and clear out all litter every three days, cleaning off everything so that the chicks cannot possibly get any old dried excrement.

The blow torch can be used on everything that has been soiled by droppings, after cleaning as well as possible. By this and by prompt removal of all chicks that show sleepiness or slow gait, it is possible to get rid of coccidiosis without much loss.

EGG MARKET FIRM

The prospect for lighter supplies is having some steadying effect on the egg market, and a small advance of one-fourth to one-half cent has recently taken place. Stocks in storage are still increasing, although not so rapidly as a year ago at this time. Some receipts showing the effects of warmer weather and improper handling are generally unsuited for storage purposes.

Fowls are in light supply and the market is cleaning up closely. Quotations on fancy broilers are holding full steady, although the volume of transactions on middle western broilers are not as yet sufficient to establish definite quotations. Shipments showing ordinary quality are difficult to move and prices are very irregular. Dealers are pushing cold storage broilers aggressively in view of increasing supplies of fresh-killed stock.

WATCH OUT FOR LICE AND MITES!

Warmer weather encourages the multiplication of lice and mites and demands closer guarding against these. The easiest methods of getting rid of these are to paint the inside of the house in any places where mites can possibly hide, with a good wood preservative preparation such as has been found effective for the purpose. Two applications a year if rightly done should keep any house free from mites, and April is a good month in which to clean up and paint all cracks, crevices, dropping boards, nests, and anything inside the house where mites can hide.

For lice there is nothing better than the nicotine sulphate preparation which has long been known to be so effective against plant lice. Have the perches or roost poles clean, then in the late afternoon paint them with this preparation. See that all the chickens roost on the perches, and the fumes from the preparation used will kill the lice on the chickens' bodies. This is such an easy way, compared with the old way of having to catch and dust each hen, although, of course, if the flock is being culled, it does not take much longer to dust them. Even so, the fumes from commercial sodium fluoride are not good for the lungs of the person using it, and this newer way will delight you. We surely cannot afford to feed lice and mites this year!

Michigan Imports 5,241 Head Horses

Despite increased breeding operations on farms, Michigan still continues to be a large importer of horses. Shipments of horses into the state from Jan. 1 to May 1 totaled 5,241 head, according to the state bureau of animal industry.

Most of the importations came from Indiana, Illinois and Iowa. These horses were mostly of draft type. Many shipments of light horses also were received from western states.

Pictured here in an unfamiliar hair-dress is Greta Garbo, famous motion picture star, who startled the film world by recent statements that she would discard her $12,500 a week contract and return to her native Sweden. Conflicting reports indicated that she had renewed the lease on her Hollywood home, making her departure unlikely.

Record Race Victor Thanks Firestone

Upper left, Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., referee of the race, and Edsel Ford, pacemaker on the first lap. Lower, Fred Frame, the winner, and Jerry Hauck, riding mechanic, in the car they drove to victory.

Men, automobiles and tires set amazing new records of speed and endurance in this year's 500-mile international race on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Giving a splendid exhibition of cool and steady driving, Fred Frame, veteran of many races, won the event in record-breaking time. With an admiring throng milling around him after his sensational victory, one of the first things Frame did was to send the following telegram to Harvey S. Firestone, pioneer tire manufacturer:

"I want to congratulate you and thank you on the wonderful performance of Firestone tires which helped me win the Indianapolis 500-mile race today without tire trouble, setting a new record of more than 104 miles an hour for the 500 miles."

The race throughout was a remarkable Firestone triumph. Every car to finish was equipped with Firestone Tires. The first four broke the former record of 101.13 miles an hour made by Peter De Paolo in 1925. In all the history of the famous motor race there has never been a more severe test of tires and never a finer demonstration of their qualities than was furnished this year. It was the thirteenth consecutive victory for Firestone.

Few Places Where One Can Escape From Noise

Not long ago an intellectual Frenchman gave utterance to a cry of alarm in a journal, signaling that soon it would be impossible to find a corner in all French territory distant enough from the noise and disturbance of a railroad, highway, factory, or amusement resort; any refuge where one may still enjoy the quietude and tranquility of nature.

He demanded the creation of a zone of silence where there may never be any of these discordant and enervating intrusions. In our own country, with its greater density of population, the problem is still more acute. There is only in the forest of Saint Hubert a little space where there is no railroad or tramway track; where the highways are sufficiently far away that the pollution of motor cars does not penetrate. The only sounds that break the silence in this bit of Arcadia are the harmonies of nature: The songs of the birds, the chirping of the crickets, the rustling of the leaves and the murmur of the brooks.

One must walk to get there, of course, and carry one's own provisions, for there is no tavern nor even a cottage, where one may obtain refreshment in this quarter of St. Hubert's wood. Behold a bourse, in all its picturesqueness, which will be the goal of many wearied with the raucous clamor of the crowded haunts of men—but only of those who have not forgotten how to walk. Forward, march—to the zone of silence.—Le Solr, Brussels.

Mortgage Foreclosure

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the mortgage dated March 24th, 1927, given by Ethelyn Holdeman, as mortgagor, to Joseph Pelong, as mortgagee, covering the land described as:

The Southeast Quarter (SE 1/4) of the Northeast Quarter (NE 1/4) of Section Two (2), Town One (1) South, Range Fourteen (14) West, Van Buren County, Michigan, which mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Van Buren County, on March 25, 1927, in liber 122 of mortgages, page 603, will be foreclosed by sale of said premises, at the north front door of the Court House, in the Village of Paw Paw, Michigan, (that being the place of holding the Circuit Court in said County), said sale to be held on the 25th day of June, 1932, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

City of Montreal Rich in Historic Interest

In Montreal the visitor finds ample store of pleasurable experience, from historic spots and structures to the most varied and modern of amusements. First in interest come the architectural and other relics of its 300 years of history, and the sites, and sometimes the actual fabrics, associated with the famous explorers, traders and missionaries who set out in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries to open to Christianity and civilization the whole midcontinent on both sides of the present international boundary.

Here the American visitor comes upon traces of La Salle, Marquette, Cadillac, Duluth, Hennepin and other dauntless pioneers who founded the cities which today perpetuate their names or their mother speech in the Middle West of the United States. Buildings dating back to 1600; monuments to Cartier, who visited Indian Hochelaga at the foot of Mount Royal, in 1536; to Champlain, who built a fort there early in the Seventeenth century; and to Maisonneuve, who founded Montreal as Ville Marie in 1642; tablets showing where La Salle lived before setting out to discover the Mississippi; and where General Montgomery lodged before joining Benedict Arnold in their unsuccessful attempt to capture Quebec—these are some of the shrines of a history shared equally by the people of the United States and Canada.—Philadelphia Record.

Chancery Sale

In pursuance and by virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for the County of Van Buren, State of Michigan, in Chancery, made and entered on the 21st day of March A. D. 1932 in a certain cause therein pending, wherein Etta Becker was plaintiff and Dewey Crakes and Muriel Crakes were defendants. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that I shall sell at public auction to the highest bidder, at the north front door of the Court House in the Village of Paw Paw, Van Buren county, Michigan, (that being the place of holding the Circuit Court for said County), on Saturday the second day of July A. WEEK OF JUNE 19TH

The week of June 19th begins with warm weather in the most parts of Michigan.

Storm conditions during the first half of week will be of the decided summer type.

Locally these storms may be somewhat severe but like all June storms will soon pass eastward.

Severe storms occurring about this time every year always get credit by many for being produced by the sun reaching its farthest north point for the year.

The wind for the first three days of this period is supposed to foretell the general weather for the next three months.

This point which the sun reaches always marks the official beginning of summer and this year falls on June 21st, 10.23 in the morning, Eastern standard time.

Dinner Stories

A Ford Model "T"

The driver of a small car found himself sitting in the road surveying his battered mudguards.

"Do you mean to say you couldn't see me coming on a straight bit of road like that?" he demanded.

The driver of the truck was not at sympathetic.

"Well, to tell you the truth," he remarked, with an irritating grin, "I did see your car, but $ thought it was a fly on my windshield!"

"Yeast"

A stout old lady of two hundred pounds was struggling valiantly up the steps of the street car.

"Stej lively, ma," urged the conductor, with more familiarity than she liked.

"Yes, young man," she retorted, "and if they'd given you a little more yeast you'd be better bred."

Johnny Was Observant

Small Johnny, from the city, was visiting his uncle on the farm for the first time, and was very much interested in the procedure of milking.

"Now you know how uncle gets the milk, don't you?" his aunt asked.

"Sure," replied Johnny, "he gives the cow some breakfast food, then a drink of water, and then drains her crankcase."

The Alibi

Tramp: "I've asked for money, I've begged for money and I've cried for money, lady."

Lady: "Have you ever thought of working for it, my man?"

Tramp: "No, not yet, mmm. You see, I'm going thru the alphabet, and I ain't got to 'W' yet."

The Real Boss

"Who is really the boss in your house?"

"Well, of course Maggie assumes command of the children, the servants, the dog, the cat, and the canary. But I can say pretty much what I please to the goldfish."

Circumstantial Evidence

When Mrs. Borden-Lodge arrived in this country after a short visit abroad, she was asked the usual question by the customs official: "Anything to declare, madam?"

"No," she replied sweetly, "nothing."

"Then, madam," said the official, "am I to take it that the fur tail I see hanging down under your coat is your own?"

In a College Town?

"Hey, what's the commotion?"

"The village picture show just burned down."

"You don't say! How many were inside?"

"A hundred college students."

"Well?"

"They refunded the money."

"Yes, yes, go on!"

"Three hundred got their money back."

PORCELAIN CUPS

By James Branch Cabell

"Oh, but they are beyond praise," said Cynthia Allonby, enraptured, "and certainly you should have presented them to the Queen."

"Her Majesty already possesses a cup of that ware," replied Lord Pevensey. "It was one of her New Year's gifts from Robert Cecil. Hers is, I believe, not quite so fine as either of yours; but then, they tell me, there is not the like of this pair in England, nor indeed on the hither side of Cataia."

He set the two pieces of Chinese pottery upon the shelves in the south corner of the room. These cups were of that seagreen tint called celadon, with a very wonderful glow and radiance.

Such oddities were the last vogue at court in this year of grace 1593; and Cynthia could not but speculate as to what monstrous sum Lord Pevensey had paid for this his last gift to her.

Now he turned, smiling, a really superb creature in his blue and gold. "I had another message from the Queen—"

"George," Cynthia said, with fond concern, "it frightens me to see you thus foolhardy in tempting alike the Queen's anger and the Plague."

"Eh, as goes the Plague, it spares nie out of ten," he answered, lightly. "The Queen, I grant you, is another pair of sleeves, for an irritated Tudor spares nobody."

But Cynthia Allonby kept silence, and did not exactly smile, while she appraised her famous young kinsman. She was flattered by, and a little afraid of, the gay self-confidence which led anybody to take such chances.

Two weeks ago it was that the painted terrible old Queen had named Lord Pevensey to go straightway into France, where rumor had it, King Henri was preparing to renounce the Reformed Religion, and making his peace with the Pope; and for two weeks Pevensey had lingered, on one pretense or another, at his home in London, with the plague creeping about the city like an invisible, incalculable flame, and the Queen asking questions at Windsor.

Of all the monarchs that had ever reigned in England, Elizabeth was the least used to having her orders disregarded. Meanwhile Lord Pevensey came every day to the Marquis of Falmouth's lodgings at Deptford; and every day Lord Pevensey pointed out to the marquis's daughter that Pevensey, whose wife had died in childbirth a year back, did not intend to go into France, for nobody could foretell how long a stay, as a widower.

Certainly it was all very flattering. "Yes, and you would be an excellent match," said Cynthia, aloud, "if that were all. And yet, what must I reasonably expect in marrying, sir, the famous Earl of Pevensey?"

"A great deal of love and petting, my dear. And if there were anything to which you had a fancy, I would get it for you."

Her glance went to those lovely cups and lingered fondly. "Yes, dear Master Generosity, if it could be purchased or manufactured, you would get it for me—"

"If it exists I will get it for you," he declared.

"I think that it exists. But I am not learned enough to know what it is, George, if I married you I would have money and fine clothes and soft hours and many lackeys to wait on me, and honor from all men. And you would be kind to me, I know, when you returned from the day's work at Windsor—or Holyrood or the Louvre. But do you not see that I would always be to you only a rather costly luxury, like those cups which the Queen's minister could afford to keep for his hours of leisure?"

He answered: "You are all in all to me. You know it. Oh, very well do you know and abuse your power, you adorable baggage, who have kept me dancing attendance for a fortnight, without ever giving me an honest yes or no." He gesticulated. "Well, but life is very dull in Deptford village, and it amuses you to twist a Queen's adviser around your finger! I see it plainly, you mix, and I acquiesce because it delights me to give you pleasure, even at the cost of some dignity. Yet I may no longer shirk the Queen's business—no, not even to amuse you, my dear."

"You said you had heard from her—again?"

"I had this morning my orders, under Glorianna's own fair hand, either to depart tomorrow into France or else to come tomorrow to Windsor. I needn't say that in the circumstances I consider France the more wholesome."

Now the girl's voice was hurt and wistful. "So, for the thousandth time, it is proven the Queen's business means more to you than I do."

He observed, unruined: "My dear, I scent unreason. This is a high matter. If the French King compounds with Rome, it means war for Protestant England. Even you must see that."

She replied, sadly. "Yes, even I, oh, certainly, my lord, even a half-witted child of seventeen can perceive as much as that."

"I was not speaking of half-witted persons, as I remember. Well, it chances that I am honored by the friendship of our gallant Bearmaiz, and am supposed to have some claim upon him, thanks to my good fortune last year in saving his life from the assassin Barriere. It chances that I may perhaps become under providence, the instrument of preserving my fellow countrymen from much grief and trumpet-sounding and throat-cutting. Instead of pursuing that chance, two weeks ago—as was my duty—I have dangled at your apronstrings in the vain hope of softening the most variable and hardest heart in the world. Now, clearly, I have not the right to do that any longer."

She admired the ennobled, the slightly rapt look which, she knew, denoted that George Bulmer was doing his duty as he saw it, even in her disappointment. "No, you have not the right. You are wedded to your statecraft, to your patriotism, to your self-advancement, or christen it what you will. You are wedded, at all events, to your man's business. You have not the time for such trifles as giving a maid that foolish and lovely sort of wooing to which every maid looks forward in her heart of hearts. Indeed, when you married the first time it was a kid of infidelity; and I am certain that poor dear mouse-like Mary must have felt that over and over again. Why, do you not see, George, even now that your wife will always come second to your real love?"

"In my heart, dear sophist, you will always come first. But it is not permitted that any loyal gentleman devote every hour of his wife to sighing and making sonnets, and to the general solacing of a maid's loneliness in this dull little Deptford."

"All this is but another way of saying your lordship would have us cups upon a shelf," she pointed out—"in readiness for your leisure."

He shrugged, said "Nonsense!" and began more lightly to talk of other matters. Thus he would do in France, such and such trinkets he would fetch back—"as toys for the most whimsical, the loveliest and the most obstinate child in all the world," he phrased it. And they would be married, Pevensey declared, in September; nor (he gaily said) did he propose to have any further argument about it. Children should be seen—the proverb was dusty, but it particularly applied to pretty children.

Cynthia let him talk. She was just a little afraid of his self-confidence, and of his tall nobleman's habit of getting what he wanted, in the end; but she despondently felt that Pevensey had failed her. He treated her as a silly infant; and his want of her, even in that capacity, was a secondary matter; he was going into France, for all his petting talk, and was leaving her to shift as she best might, until he could spare the time to resume his love-making.

Now when Pevensey had gone the room seemed darkened by the withdrawal of so much magnificence. Cynthia watched from the window as the tall earl rode away, with three handsome clad retainers. Yes, George was very fine and admirable, no doubt of it; even so, there was relief in the reflection that for a month or two she was rid of him.

Turning, she faced a lean dishevelled man, who stood by the Magdalen tapestry scratching his chin. He had unquiet bright eyes, this out-of-elbows poet whom a marquis's daughter was pleased to patronize, and his red hair today was unpardonably puzzled. Nor were his manners beyond reproach, for now, without saying anything, he too went to the window. He dragged one foot a little as he walked.

"So my Lord Pevensey departs! Look how he rides in triumph! like lame Tamburlain, with Techeles and Usumecans and Theridamas to attend him, and with the sunset turning the dust raised by their horses' hoofs into a sort of golden haze about them. It is a beautiful world. And truly, Mistress Cyn," the poet said, reflectively, "that Pevensey is a very splendid ephemera. If not a kind himself, at least he goes magnificently to settle the affairs of kings. Were modesty not my failing, Mistress Cyn, I would acclaim you as strangely lucky, in being beloved by two fine fellows that have not their like in England."

"Truly, you are not always thus modest, Kit Marlowe—"

"But, Lord, how seriously Pevensey takes it all! and himself in particular! Why, there departs from us, in befitting state, a personage whose opinion as to every topic in the world is written legibly in the carriage of those shoulders, even when seen from behind and from so considerable a distance. And in not one syllable do any of these opinions differ from the opinions of his great-grandfathers. Oh, and hark to Deptford! now all the oats in the Corn-market are cheering this bulwark of Protestant England, this rising young hero of a people with no nonsense about them. Yes, it is a very quaint and rather splendid ephemera."

A marquis's daughter could not quite approve of the way in which this shoemaker's son, however talented, shailed at his betters. "Pevensey will be the greatest man in these kingdoms some day. Indeed, Kit Marlowe, there are those who say he is that much already."

"Oh, very probably! Still, I am puzzled by human greatness. A century hence what will he matter, this Pevensey? His ascent and his declension will have been completed, and his foolish battles and treaties will have given place to other foolish battles and treaties, and oblivion will have swallowed this glistening bluebottle, plumes and fine lace and stately ruff and all. Why, he is but an adviser to the queen of half an island, whereas my Tamburlaine was lord of all the golden ancient East; and what does my Tamburlaine matter now, save that he gave Kit Marlowe the subject of a drama? Hah, softly thought! for does even that very greatly matter? Who really cares today about what scratches were made upon wax by that old Euripides, the latchet of whose sandals I am not worthy to unloose? No, not quite worthy, as yet!"

And thereupon the shabby fellow sat down in the tall leather-covered chair with Pevensey had just vacated; and this Marlowe nodded his flaming head portentously. He touched the breast of a weather-beaten doublet. He gave her that queer twisted sort of smile which the girl could not but find attractive, somehow. He said: "Why but this heart thumping here inside me may stop any moment like a broken clock. Here is Euripides writing better than I; and here in my body, under my hand, is the mechanism upon which depend all those masterpieces that are to blot the Athenian from the reckoning, and I have no control of it!"

"Indeed, I fear that you control few things," she told him, "and that least of all do you control your taste for taverns and bad women. Oh, I hear tales of you!" And Cynthia raised a reproving fore-finger.

"True tales, no doubt." He shrugged. "Lacking the moon he vainly cried for, the child learns to content himself with a penny whistle."

"Ah, but the moon is far away," the girl said, smiling—"too far to hear the sound of human crying; and besides, the moon, as I remember it, was never a very amorous goddess—"

"Just so," he answered: "also she was called Cynthia, and she too, was beautiful."

"Yet is it the heart that cries to me, my poet?" she asked him, softly, "or just the lips?"

"Oh, both of them, most beautiful and inaccessible of goddesses." Then Marlowe leaned toward her, laughing and shaking that disreputable red head. "Still, you are very foolish, in your latest incarnation, to be wasting your rays upon carpet ears who will not outwear a century. Were modesty not my failing, I repeat, I could name somebody who will last longer. Yes, and—if, but, I lacked that plaguely virtue—I would advise you to go a-gypsying with that nameless somebody, so that two manikins might snatch their little share of the big things that are eternal, just as the butterfly fares intertidally and joyously, with the sun for his torchboy, through a universe wherein thought cannot estimate the unimportance of a butterfly, and wherein not even the chaste moon is very important."

"Yes, certainly I would advise you to have done with this vanity of courts and saques, of satins and fans and fiddles, this dallying with tinsels and bright vapors; and very movingly I would exhort you to seek out Arcadia, travelling hand in hand with that still nameless somebody." And of a sudden the restless man began to sing.

Sang Kit Marlowe:

"Come live with me and be my love, And we will all the pleasures prove That hills and valleys, dales and fields, Woods or steepy mountain yields."

"And we will sit upon the rocks, And see the shepherds feed their flocks By shallow rivers, to whose falls Melodious birds sing madrigals—"

But the girl shook her small, wise head decisively. "That is all very fine, but, as it happens, there is no such place as this Arcadia, where people can frolic in perpetual sunlight the year round, and find their food and clothing miraculously provided. No, nor can you, I am afraid, give me what all maids really, in their heart of hearts, desire far more than any sugar-candy Arcadia. Oh, as I have so often told you, Kit, I think you love no woman. You love words. And your seraglio is tenanted by very beautiful words, I grant you, though there is no longer any Sestos builded of agate and crystal, either, Kit Marlowe. For, as you may perceive, sir, I have read all that lovely poem you left with me—"

She saw how interested he was, saw how he almost smirked. "Aha, so you think it not quite mad, eh, the conclusion of my 'Hero and Leander'?"

"It is your best. And your mid-dlemost, my poet, is better than aught else in English," she said, politely, and knowing how much he delighted to hear such remarks.

"Come, I retract my charge of foolishness, for you are plainly a wench of rare discrimination. And yet you say I do not love you!"

"And I wonder how much of these ardors," she thought, "is kindled by my praise of his verses?" She bit her lip, and she regarded him with a hint of sadness. She said, aloud: "But I did not, after all speak to Lord Pevensey concerning the printing of your poem. Instead, I burned your 'Hero and Leander.'"

She saw him jump, as under a whip-lash. Then he smiled again, in that wry fashion of his. "I lament the loss to letters, for it was my only copy. But you knew that."

"Yes, Kit, I knew it was your only copy."

"Oh! and for what reason did you burn it, may one ask?"

"I thought you loved it more than you loved me. It was my rival, I thought—" The girl was conscious of remorse, and yet it was remorse mingled with a mounting joy.

"And so you thought a jingle scribbled upon a bit of paper could be your rival with me!"

Then Cynthia no longer doubted, but gave a joyous little sobbing laugh, for the love of her disreputable dear poet was sustaining the stringent testing she had devised. She touched his freckled hand caressingly, and her face was as no man had ever seen it, and her voice, too, caressed him.

"Ah, you have made me the happiest of women, Kit; Kit, I am almost disappointed in you, though, that you do not grieve more for the loss of that beautiful poem."

Charmers of History

MAINTENON

The Marquise de Maintenon possessed a rare beauty and charm that made lasting conquests.

Her early life was passed under the shadow of troublous events. She was born in a prison at Niort, France, where her parents were then (1635) held as the result of religious trouble. Her girlhood had been spent in hardships that for a time threatened to break her spirit.

But the poet and wit, Scarron, met her and, surrendering to her charm, married her and endeavored to ease her pathway in life.

The experience of the Marquise de Maintenon in the period of her youth gave her charm a touch of somberness that made it all the more deep-striking.

All who came to know her became subject to her power of fascination, both the lighthearted and the more serious minded.

And after a while, following the death of her husband (Scarron) in 1660, she came under the notice of Louis XIV.

That great monarch immediately fell under the spell of Maintenon's charm, and through the years that followed she increased the royal conquest that she had, from the first, made.

And her charm subjugated many others that came within its range, so that, both as a King's favorite and by force of her own attraction, she acquired a strong following in the court.

Different from many royal favorites, the Marquise de Maintenon was most circumspect in her conduct and observed proprieties as nearly as she could.

In the latter period of her sway over the royal heart, her influence extended to things spiritual, and finally she became the wife of Louis XIV by a private marriage.

Louis XIV was born September 5, 1638; died September 1, 1715; reigned, 1643-1715.

Madame de Maintenon was born November 27, 1635; died, April 15, 1690.

Differen in Walking And Sleep Thoughts

While you are awake, you like to feel that your thoughts are your educations, that they stand apart from you as objects, which, so far as you can make out, anyone ought to see. Waking thoughts are abstractions, Dr. Jesse W. Sprows writes, in the Washington Star.

When you are dreaming, the situation is reversed. Your dream thoughts are your own. They are a part of you. You express your personal self in everything you dream about. You put yourself in the center of the dream picture, and countenance only those thoughts that correspond to the picture. It's impossible to think in dreams without thinking in pictures. And it's impossible to get away from your image of yourself. In dreams your thoughts are activities, not abstractions.

It is not hard to discover why you have these two kinds of thoughts. Your waking hours deal with a world of reality. And reality is always the world that lies about you. Your business as a walking thinker is to manipulate this world of externality. So you regard your waking thoughts as mechanisms merely.

But when you are asleep, you save withdrawn from the world of reality. The "you" of yourself, which had to take a minor position in your waking world, now has its moments. Your fancies have full sway, and you fashion all sorts of imaginary pictures why you sometimes experience a shock when waking suddenly.

Business Failures Seen as Barrier to Lower Living Costs

Business failures present a challenge that must be met, since in addition to the heavy losses entailed by those who fail and by their creditors, they have an unsettling effect upon all business. This conclusion was voiced by H. R. English, chief of the bureau of business information of the University of Wisconsin extension division, in a message on "Why Business Men Fail." By raising the manufacturers' and wholesalers' cost of doing business, he said, these failures result in higher prices, which raise the cost of living for every consumer.

The average annual toll of business failures in the United States for a prosperous five-year period ending 1928 was 19,000, and the average liabilities were more than $600,000,000 a year. The year 1931, worst since 1896, recorded more than 26,000 failures, or one and one-fourth per cent of all the business concerns in the country, with liabilities to creditors amounting to $2,281,000,000. These do not include failures of individuals, nor of stock brokers and real estate dealers, but do include banks and other financial institutions.

Two contrasting summaries of the causes of business failures—Bradstreet's and a New Jersey report—were cited by Mr. English. In the Bradstreet report, which, the speaker pointed out, has considerable value although it fails to reach far enough below the surface, lack of capital was given as the most frequent cause of failures in 1928—a representative year of prosperity. This was blamed for 36 per cent of the bankruptcies.

Incompetence, or lack of business ability, was credited with 31 per cent of the cases; specific conditions, beyond control, were said to be responsible for 18 per cent, inexperience for 5 per cent, and competition for 3 1/2 per cent. Less important causes are fraudulent disposition of property, unwise granting of credit, failures of others, neglect of business, personal extravagance and speculation outside of the regular business.

In the New Jersey investigation, conducted by the U. S. department of commerce with the co-operation of Yale university and of Federal Judge William Clark of New Jersey, "poor business methods and practices" were given first place as a cause of failure. Inadequate bookkeeping, or none at all, was found in more than one-half of the cases investigated.

"You might as well try to navigate a ship without a compass," Mr. English asserted, "as try to run a business without keeping an adequate set of books. Yet, in New Jersey, it was found that one-fifth of the failing retailers, nearly one-third of the unsuccessful contractors, and one-half of the failing real estate men kept no books at all."

Ninety per cent of the New Jersey retailers who failed had made no use of credit bureaus. Neither did 73 per cent of the manufacturers and 69 per cent of the wholesalers. Mr. English urged that, wherever possible, business men make use of their credit bureaus for credit information. These are established in a number of Wisconsin cities to protect business men against excessive bad-debt losses and effect lower costs of doing business, which in turn may be passed on to the consumer in the form of lower prices.

SUMMER CHILD CARE ADVISED BY "M" DOCTORS

With school days ending soon and children of all ages scattering to playgrounds, resorts and camps, many of the child health problems of winter are lessened, but parents will do well not to disregard certain summer hazards and general health rules, warns the Children's Department in the University of Michigan hospital.

The child's food during the summer should be sufficient and varied and not cut down under the impression that a regular diet will be "overheating," because the average child makes use of a large amount of energy in hard summer play. Boiled milk is strongly recommended for children of all ages, because it is easiest to digest and avoids entirely the danger of contracting typhoid fever, tuberculosis or other disease often carried in milk. Although boiling will destroy the scurvy preventing Vitamin C, this may be gotten from orange or tomato juice and fresh vegetables. Plenty of green vegetables should play a part in any summer diet. Boiling is especially important where pasteurized milk is not obtainable, as in many camps and resorts, where it is also advisable to boil the water, pollution of such water supplies being common.

Light clothing is advised as most healthful, both for babies and older children, with extra wraps available for cool days or nights. Sunlight must be taken in a happy medium; most children will naturally want plenty, but should be taken and children should not be kept in the direct sun against their will under the theory that continuous exposure will do special good.

Bare feet are healthful for children and adults both, if the ground is free from glass, nails and other cutting objects, and if chance cuts are promptly washed and treated with iodine. On stony ground, however, stout soled low shoes are advised as protection against troublesome bruises. Bathing and swimming are both healthy recreations, but children are advised against getting water in the mouth and a bathing cap is suggested for diving, both to keep the water out of the ear and to avoid concussion of the water on the ear drum. And as insurance against blistered arms and legs children should learn to know and stay away from poison ivy, poison sumach and poison oak, and to apply strong soap suds if contact has been made.

Fair Chance Given All Church Choirs

The country church choir singing contest to be held at Michigan State College Friday, July 29, has been divided into two sections this year so choirs which have had relatively little training will not have to compete against choirs which have won prizes in previous years.

Choirs from country churches or those from churches in towns with less than 2,000 population are eligible to compete in the contest. Each choir must have at least six members who have sung regularly in that church choir.

Groups which won first, second or third prize in last year's contest will comprise Class A this year. Other choirs will compete in Class B. The prize money, obtained from the R. E. Olds Community Singing Fund, will be equally divided between the two classes. First prize in each case is $60.

Each choir is required to sing two numbers, one of which may be selected by the choir leaders. The number which must be sung by each Class A choir is "Listen to the Lambs." Class B choirs will sing "The Sun Shall Be No More My Light by Day." All the choirs will combine in a chorus to sing two selections in the Farmers' Day program July 29.

Those interested in entering this contest can get detailed information about the rules for entry and the basis for judging the choirs from the Director of Short Courses, Michigan State College.

Children Must Care For Their Parents

Children whose parents are inmates of the county infirmary are to face legal action to compel them to care for their parents if they are financially able, C. B. Wilson, member of the county poor commission, announces as the result of the successful outcome of a test case brought in probate court under an act passed in 1929.

During recent months infirmary officials report that children driving cars of expensive makes have been visiting their parents at the infirmary. It is believed that many of these can be compelled to take their parents to their homes or pay for their care at the infirmary.

Down and Out

Prospective Employer: "Why did you leave your last post?"
Chauffeur: "My gov'nor and his wife fell out, sir."
Prospective Employer: "But why leave for that?"
Chauffeur: "Well, if you must know, sir, they fell out of the car."

Among Cotton Fashions Featured

—Copyright, 1932, by Fairchild.

Pique and organdie for evening wear are of first importance. Pale pink pique in a fine wale decorated by puffed flowers of black is chosen for the gown at left, which is further enhanced by a braided straw belt with a large button in bright red. The jacket ensemble is of baby blue organdie embroidered allover in white.

Speaking of Style

By IRENE VAIL

A tricky little notion you are sure to like is that of contrasting sleeves. These may be set on a guimpe, in which case it is possible to have an assortment of colors, which may be introduced with white. The white gown with colored details promises to be as popular as the colored one with white accessories, and that is saying a great deal. Chantal made a point of contrasting sleeves in her mid-season collection. They were roundly applauded. She showed, for instance, a smart black evening dress with bright blue puffed sleeves and some blue at the neckline. She showed, also, a black afternoon frock with ivory sleeves and yoke, and a white sports frock with yellow mesh sleeves and scarf. Trimming appears on the sleeve more frequently than almost anywhere else this season. The short little cape for the beach—they call it the sun-cape—is one of those things that everyone should be sure to have. It offers just enough protection from the sun when a backless pajama or bathing suit is worn.

Pullover capes that at the back are almost waist length, disappear at front into a blouse, tying about the waistline or forming a bib that buttons onto the belt. The short cape that is buttoned on one shoulder is a beach asset, with matching bathing suit, or with pajamas. And the girl who chooses one in rough lacy mesh or jersey could wear it, too, over her low-necked tennis dress—just a step removed from an evening dress.

The pique evening dress is going over in a big way, and it is attractive enough to win out, even without any ulterior motive of economy. It is getting smart to be simple, and if any one can think of anything simpler than a pique well-tailored evening dress—untrimmed, of course—she is entitled to some sort of medal. Colored pique is most effective, and the new raspberry tones are an inspiration.

Blankets to Be Labeled As to Wool Content

The homemaker will soon be able to purchase wool blankets with a degree of confidence because blanket manufacturers and distributors, at a meeting, held under the auspices of the national bureau of standards, agreed that this merchandise in the future will be distinctly labeled as to the percentage of wool contained. The new standard goes into effect on December 31, 1932, both for new production and for existing stocks.

The proposed standard includes the following regulations:

1. No finished blanket containing less than 5 per cent wool shall carry the word wool in any form.
2. Blankets labeled with the word wool in any form and containing: (1) between 5 per cent and 25 per cent wool shall be labeled "part wool not less than 5 per cent wool"; (2) more than 25 per cent wool shall be labeled with the guaranteed (minimum) wool content in percentage; (3) above 98 per cent wool shall be labeled "all wool."

Letters on the advertising labels of part wool blankets have to be not less than three-sixteenths inch high. The wool percentage refers to the fibers employed and means the percentage of wool in the entire blanket and not in the filling alone. In the event of a disagreement between the buyer and the seller as to the methods of test to determine the amount of wool in the finished article, the test methods used and approved by the Bureau of Standards shall be considered satisfactorily accurate.

Old Attics

By DOROTHY SPARROW

I love to explore old attics,
When the day is bleak with rain.
To laugh over quaint old pictures,
And search through trunks in vain
For some long hidden treasure,
A locket, or curl of hair,
That would speak of forgotten romance,
Whose sweetness still lingers there.

Bits of Grandmother's finery,
Once her joy and pride,
In lavender scented paper
Carefully laid aside.
A flower pressed in a journal,
Its color faded away
From the splendor once it boasted
On that long forgotten day.

With a sigh for days of glamour,
I slowly turn away,
Descending to another world,
More swift, more light and gay.
And as I go, I notice,
Through the narrow window pane,
The Sun ascends his throne once more,
And drives away the rain.

Cereal and Milk Are Most Complete Balanced, Inexpensive Food

In homes where the housewife must search for the most inexpensive foods and yet keep the family diet well balanced, it is wise to plan the menus around milk and cereals. Cereals are our most nutritious and least expensive foods and they may be used freely for any course at any meal of the day. Bread is, of course, the commonest cereal food. Oatmeal, hominy grits, cornmeal, rolled, cracked or finely milled wheat and rice are the least expensive cereals and they may be served as porridge for breakfast, or combined with other foods for luncheon or dinner.

I shall give you the recipes for several inexpensive, substantial dishes in which cereals play the leading part. Tomatoes, fresh or canned, lean meat or fish, some green vegetables—and plenty of milk—must supplement the cereal diet if bodies are to remain strong and healthy enough to resist disease.

Mexican rice makes a satisfying main dish. Fry a cup of diced bacon until brown in a large frying pan. Remove the bits of bacon and add two large sliced onions. Fry until golden brown, then remove and add to the bacon. Wash and drain a cup of rice, and stir in the hot grease until brown, then add two cups of canned tomatoes and half a cup of chili sauce. Simmer together for ten minutes, then add two cups of boiling water and season with half a teaspoon of chili powder and a teaspoon of salt. Cover the pan and cook slowly until the rice has absorbed the liquid. Now add the fried bacon and onions and serve very hot.

Prune muns are good enough to take the place of dessert. Take one cup of stewed prunes and juice. Remove the prunes and add enough boiling water to the juice to make one cup. Pour over one-half cup rolled oats and let stand until the water is absorbed. Remove the stones from the prunes and add to the rolled oats, then add one-fourth cup sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon melted shortening and one yeast cake dissolved in one-fourth of a cup of lukewarm water. Add two and three-fourths cups water and let rise until double its bulk. Add one-fourth cup of chopped nut meats and mold the dough into small balls. Place in greased muffin tins and let rise again until double its bulk. Add one-fourth cup of chopped nut meats and mold the dough into small balls. Place in greased muffin tins and let rise again until double in bulk. Bake in a hot oven for fifteen to twenty minutes.

To make the tomato-cereal soup, cook together for one hour two cups canned tomatoes, two cups water, one tablespoon sugar, one-half small onion, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, a bit of bayleaf, one-half cup rolled oats or four tablespoons of fine cereal and two tablespoons peanut butter. Rub the mixture through a strainer and add more seasonings if needed. Serve hot.

The main dish in the last menu calls for one cup of cooked whole wheat cereal. Mix the cereal with one cup of milk, add one-fourth teaspoon salt and two egg yolks slightly beaten. Put enough American cheese through the food chopper or a coarse grater to make one cupful, and fold it with two egg whites beaten until stiff into the first mixture. Pour into buttered baking pan, lay slices of bacon across the top and bake in a moderate oven for half an hour.

Modes and Manners

Question: "Does a valet wear livery? Also, will you please tell me what the correct pronunciation of 'valet' is?"

Answer: A valet does not wear livery; probably because a man does not like to see his servants all dressed up in uniform. He dresses simply and as inconspicuously as possible. At all times, except when he is traveling with his employer, he wears dark gray or black trousers. His shoes are never highly polished and he wears a dark tie. If he has a taste for colored shirts, he must save it for his day off, as while at work, whether at home or en route, he wears white linen. His waistcoat is high buttoned and of black, which is also the color of his coat. The coat has tails, either short rounded ones or the more formal swallowtails. When traveling with his employer, a valet may wear a simple morning suit in dark blue or brown, if he likes. Usually he wears a hard hat.

The word "valet" should be pronounced "val-et." If you look in the dictionary, you will find that "valay" with the accent on the first syllable, is given also.

You and Your Child

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

CONFLICTS OFTEN HOME BREWED

Looking back to your own childhood, you may remember a time when you wanted something very much and after asking for it repeatedly your mother replied: "You may have it if you like, but remember it's going to worry me." The object in question might have been a pocket knife, which Uncle Bill sent as a birthday gift, or your big brother's bicycle.

Of course, mother meant well. She was thinking only of your safety at the time. But in your heart you knew you could safely manipulate a pocket knife with three blades. For hadn't you engaged in whittling surreptitiously? Or if it was the bicycle... hadn't you been taking rides on Billy Smith's around the corner after school? Of course you fell once or twice and mother knew why, but hadn't you learned how to ride since then?

Whatever confidence you may have had in your skill, however, was sure to be broken down upon having gained permission. Strange, wasn't it? How now that you could help yourself to the knife with three blades or to brother's bicycle, you didn't? Mother's words, "Remember it's going to worry me," her tone and her expression numbered you for the moment. For the first time in your life you realized what it means to be "between the devil and the deep blue sea."

Does Mother Know Best? Maybe you decided to wait until you grew older before taking the knife or the bicycle. If you did, you were an unusually docile child. But if you really wanted that knife or the bicycle you probably took what you wanted.

You may not have realized it at the time. But this was a crucial moment in your life, your future attitude to your mother depending in large part upon the outcome of your adventure with said knife or bicycle.

For if you came in crying shortly after, your finger cut or your knee battered from a fall off the bicycle, your mother's "I told you so," would have filled you with new respect for her. True, she hadn't warned you in so many words of what would happen, but she had had a premonition. Else why did she take the stand which she had?

On the other hand, if you came through the experience intact, you were inclined to be doubtful of mother's predictions along these lines in the future. Your attitude from now on was to be just a little cocky. Well, anyway, there were not to be many things which you would not chance.

I have reconstructed this episode out of the past to help readers recall some parallel incident in their own lives, in order the better to appreciate the conflict which must go on within their own children at such times. The reason why I have brought up the question at all, is to point out the serious consequences which half-way and half-hearted injunctions of this kind may have upon the child's personality and morale.

Better Time for All An adolescent girl may want to go to a school dance. Her mother does not think she is old enough to stay out unchaperoned until 11. "You may go if you like," she sanctions finally, "but it will break my heart."

Why place a child in a position where she must ask herself this question: "Shall I go and break my mother's heart? Or shall I stay home and break my own?"

If a parent is to give consent finally, no matter how unwillingly, it should go without thorns to prick the child's conscience. As long as the child is going to the dance anyway, why not make it possible for her to have a good time?

It is very selfish for a parent to allow her child to go out knowing, as she must, that her child's evening has already been spoiled. How much kinder under the circumstances for a mother to say, "No, my daughter. I have said 'no' a dozen times, and don't want you to ask me again."

Your Handwriting—and What It Tells

By JANET WINTON

ALLURE IN ORIGINAL STYLE "Dear Janet Winton: I am copying a paragraph out of a book. Please analyze my handwriting."

When handwriting is so obviously artistic, the graphologist is put on guard and proceeds to analyze it most cautiously. There is something about a strikingly artistic hand which gives rise to doubt. The real artist is serious about his work. His work is all so does the rhythm. Tracing will more clearly illustrate this fact. It will be observed, for example, that many a curve and twist of the pen is employed to complete the rhythmic phrase.

From your handwriting, as from your actions and tastes, some may consider you a frivolous person. But this is not true as your script reflects that matters, and he submerges himself in it. Here in your own handwriting is enough evidence to establish you definitely as an artistic "personality." It expresses how you live and how you act rather than what you do.

Such a handwriting, in exotic letter forms, in exaggerated curves, loops and the decorative twists which are so pronounced throughout, is not without affectation. It shows an appreciation of form and ceremony and it shows a love of ease and luxury. From your script I gather also that you are sensitive to your environment that you like to surround yourself with beautiful and expensive objects.

Delicate pen strokes show you to be idealistic and of an impractical nature. No person with materialistic tendencies or with the least suggestion in his makeup of coarseness could write with the fine pen it must take to turn out such a piece of work like your handwriting in the illustration. Obviously you write with ease, and graceful strokes come quiet naturally.

From a graphological standpoint a broken-up gasoline is beautiful for what it represents in personality traits. Here, it stresses refined tastes. It shows tenderness, sympathy and appeal. It shows that you are affected without making yourself over-conspicuous or getting yourself talked about. In your case, rather, this is associated with grace. You like to entertain and are an excellent hostess for the reason that nothing is too good to be served when it will please a guest or might possibly help to make him more comfortable. You are inventive, give original parties and outdoor yourself in charm.

Dash punctuation marks suggest a sense of the dramatic. This is an interesting find in a script which is otherwise unemotional. Along with observation shown in small writing—the ability to create ideas, in unique letter forms—and facility of expression in the gliding motion of so involved ability and a flair for writing.

But you are a very versatile person, as full loops show, and doubtless have many hobbies besides writing.

logical habits of thought in the concentrated style. Except for the capitals and the loop forms this script actually shows economy of motion also.

Hooked "t" crossings shows the ability to concentrate and persistency of purpose. Lower case "e" which follows the style of capital "E" is evidence of cultural aspirations rather than attainment, and tends to corroborate my first impression of the writing; that it shows an artistic personality rather than artistic capability.

Legibility in writing is an index to honesty, but I doubt if you are frank. The background tilt expresses reserve, while lassoed and tightly closed "o" signify secretiveness. You are friendly, gracious but there is an air of mystery, which must help to accentuate your attractiveness.

Tabernacle Sending 68 to Conference

Sixty-eight delegates and a large number of visitors from the Seventh Day Adventist Tabernacle will attend the biennial session of the Michigan Conference in Hastings, June 16 to 26, inclusive.

More than five hundred delegates from the entire state are expected for the gathering, the first to be held since the merger of the West Michigan and East Michigan Conferences, and the inclusion of the Upper Peninsula churches in the same group. It is expected as a result of this merger that this year's conference will be the largest ever held in the state.

A special meeting of the Tabernacle board will be held this evening for the purpose of naming a committee to select the 68 delegates from the local church.

Important items of business at the gathering of Seventh Day Adventists will include election of president, treasurer and an executive committee of the conference to serve for the ensuing two years. Elder S. E. Wight and C. B. Caldwell, of Lansing, are president and treasurer, respectively, of the conference.

Cook Electrically For Kitchen Comfort

Summer is with us now. Electric cookery means a cool kitchen to work in during sultry, hot summer days. An electric range concentrates the heat directly under the utensil on the surface burner, and inside the well insulated oven. A minimum of heat escapes into the room to add to the cook's discomfort.

Electricity does not rob the air in your kitchen of comfort-giving oxygen. You will not be subject to a nauseatingly hot kitchen if you cook electrically. Time controlled electric ranges automatically start and stop cooking operations even when you are miles away. For real convenience cook electrically.

It costs no more to cook electrically. Our records show that the average electric cooking bill is only $4.00 per month.

Your Agent-- Throughout the World
When you deposit a check in your bank you charge the bank with the responsibility of collecting it for you—no matter in what city, state or even country it may be payable.

If this service were not available think how it would limit the scope of your business transactions. Through this banking service you are now able to have constant dealings with people hundreds and thousands of miles away by letting your bank make your collections. Your bank is able to offer this service because of the close cooperation of the network of banks extending over the country. Think what it would be like without it.
