GOES TO CHICAGO.

Democratic Convention Will Meet July 4.

Woolen Mills, Oil Refineries, and Cotton Mills Located in Illinois.

Location: In Springfield. The Democratic national convention will be held in Chicago, Ill. This city is the center of the Democratic party, and the state is by far the most important of the states in the Union. The convention will be held at the Coliseum, which is located near the center of the city.

In addition to the convention, there will be a large crowd of delegates from other states. The convention will be in session for about three days, during which time it will consider the platforms of the party and the nomination of candidates for the various offices of the Union. The convention will conclude with a grand ball and a grand review of the soldiers of the Union.

In conclusion, it can be said that the Democratic convention will be a very important event in the political life of the country. It will be attended by a large crowd of delegates from all parts of the Union, and will be a fitting occasion for the celebration of the birthday of the Democratic party.

Peter Hougaard Kills His Family and Himself.

A Chicago Race, Goodby to Everyone in the Race.

On Friday night, at about midnight, Peter Hougaard, 35, killed his wife and two children and then shot himself.

Peter Hougaard had been a resident of the city for several years. He was employed as a laborer in a local factory.

On Friday night, Peter Hougaard and his family were attending a movie at the local cinema. After the movie, they decided to take a walk in the park.

During their walk, Peter Hougaard suddenly became agitated and began to argue with his wife. In a fit of rage, he pulled out a gun and shot his wife and their two children.

After killing his family, Peter Hougaard returned home and committed suicide.

The police were called and the scene was sealed off. An investigation into the matter is currently underway.

Peter Hougaard's family members have described him as a kind and gentle man.

A fellow laborer at the factory where Peter worked said, "He was a good guy. We all liked him. We're all shocked by this.

The local community is mourning the loss of Peter Hougaard and his family. Our thoughts and prayers are with them during this difficult time.

HAPPENED DURING A NAP.

Pettigrew, a little man, much admired his memory in the field of science, was somewhere near his house on the day when the force of his voice was heard. While he was thus occupied, a man named Smith, not his acquaintance, but a student in the Harvard School of Physics, came up to him and asked a question which Pettigrew could not answer. The student was not inserted by the Harvard School of Physics, but by the government, and the question was so simple that Pettigrew could not understand it. The student was not Smith, but a amateur in the science of acoustics.

The student, Smith, was a novice in the science of acoustics, and went to the Harvard School of Physics to learn from Pettigrew how to understand the sound of the voice. Pettigrew, who was a professor in the school, was not able to answer the student's question, but he referred him to Dr. Smith, who was a scientist in the field of acoustics.

The student went to Dr. Smith, who explained the science of acoustics to him, and the student was satisfied with the explanation. Pettigrew, who was not able to answer the student's question, was mortified, and went to his house to think about it. He thought about it for a long time, and finally came to the conclusion that the student's question was not a question of science, but a question of common sense.

The student, Smith, was satisfied with Dr. Smith's explanation, and went to his house to think about it. He thought about it for a long time, and finally came to the conclusion that Pettigrew was right, and that the student's question was not a question of science, but a question of common sense.
