

Asked Garry Bernath what was the experience like working the assembly line?

The most enjoyable part of doing this was talking to the membership about issues that were important to them.

At the time, Catapiller was on the verge of permently replacing thier strikers. Bob and Ray on the Install door paralz operation were very knowledgeable and concerned about the implications of this strike on us as autoworkers.

I had my normal disagreement with Jim on dashmats over the present National political scene.

The people in area 20 seemed to enjoy watching me break a sweat on the park brake cable job, thanks for the help Brad.

All the people I worked with took pride in producing quality work. They all like to be identified with a company and a product that their friends and neighbors see as high caliber.

From my point of view Quality is a Union issue. Unions need to be the champions of quality, in the sense of ~~the~~ consumer satisfaction. A large part of today's political attack on Unions is to isolate them as "narrow special
