The Manager: Trainer and Coach

Regular readers will remember that I wrote several articles during 1999 on the Management Responsibilities of Course Managers/Head Greenkeepers and one area of responsibility was training. Most training that takes place on the golf course is 'on the job' with many Golf Course Managers already running training session for their staff and, in some cases, assessing competence on the completion of training.

What is involved in 'On the Job Training'?

The first thing to ask is What do my staff need to know? This involves the use of a technique known as a Task Analysis. This simply means breaking the job down into its component parts and may be simple or more complex depending on the job. For example, Cutting a new hole is a straight forward process which requires few decisions except where to cut the hole. On the other hand, applying fertiliser can require a number of decisions to be made eg. when, how, what, why.

There are some basic steps that you need to take when you are conducting a training session. These are:

1. Summarise the whole procedure
2. Put all of the component parts into context and try to give your staff a mental picture of what is required.
3. Explain the critical points as you progress.
4. Let staff practise the first stage and make sure that they can explain their actions.
5. Continue until each stage is mastered.
6. Let staff complete the whole process, giving feedback and encouragement where needed.

Content

1. Summarise the whole procedure
2. Issue any notes, manuals, operating procedures
3. Point out the best method of doing the task and why
4. Review the required performance in terms of time, standards and safety requirements
5. Check if there are any questions.

If all of the above seems to be common sense then think about what can and does happen in training sessions or, worse, in the use of untrained staff. How many of you have been told to 'Go out and cut the first three greens' when you have not been trained on the mower, do not know the height of cut, do not know what to do if players approach, have not been given health and safety brief etc ? Watch out for further articles in future editions of Greenkeeper International.
