Beating the heat

Buffalo billed as wonder grass

BY PETER BLAIS

Barton Creek Country Club in Austin, Texas, is experimenting with two varieties of buffalograss that will eventually be available nationwide and could save the golf industry millions of dollars annually in water, fertilizer, pesticide and mowing expenses.

Prairie buffalograss developed at Texas A&M University was introduced to the perimeter rough and along steep bunker faces of the new Ben Crenshaw-designed course beginning in late June.

Isolite expected barrier-breaker

BY MARK LESLIE

Isolite is no panacea, Lou Haines is quick to say, but it could lower the body count in impending water wars.

Haines, the technical services director of New Golf Concepts, Inc., of Westminster, Colo., is optimistic that tremendous inroads will be made into America’s golf courses by Isolite, which layout plays from four tees — the shortest over 5,267 yards and the longest 7,085. See pages 12-13 for more information on new courses proposed and approved around the United States. Photo by Chip Henderson

UK is definitely no U.S.

BY BRADLEY S. KLEIN

A revolution in golf course maintenance in the United Kingdom has begun at the same time its greenkeepers are being lured to Continental Europe. The culprit causing an Americanization of greenkeeping is television, according to Brits in the industry.

The pull to Europe is coming from salaries that are double and triple the $15,000 to $22,000 earned in the United Kingdom. British and International Golf Greenkeepers Association Chairman Ivor Scoones acknowledged the "brain drain" is a living force between England and the continent.

Budget troubles at home tend to magnify the difference between tending a course in one place or the other. BIGGA Executive Director Neil Thomas said greenkeepers in Great Britain, who historically have had low maintenance budgets, now "have to deal with public perceptions about how a golf course should look."

Discrimination stops at supers’ desk

BY MARK LESLIE

Discrimination doesn’t exist on groundskeeping crews at country clubs around the nation — even those that exclude certain people as members, according to superintendents surveyed.

"Segregation and integration are just not an issue (on grounds crews)," said Gerald Faubel, president of the Golf Course Superintendents Association of America and superintendent at Saginaw (Mich.) Country Club. "I have never seen any discrimination whatsoever with regard to race or sex on a grounds crew."

Faubel’s remarks followed the debacle at Sholl Creek Country Club in Birmingham, Ala., in which the club’s discrimination against blacks threatened to prevent the PGA Championship from being played.

"If you found any segregation in grounds crews it would really surprise me," Faubel said.

James Singerling, executive vice president of the Club Managers Association of America and a former club manager, said clubs “never have a hiring policy.”

 Continued on page 22