HOAG NEW NGCOA PRESIDENT
CHARLESTON, S.C. — Jeff Hoag of Scott Lake Country Club in Conestoga Park, Mich., is the new president of the National Golf Course Owners Association. Class A professional Vince Alfonso, The Rail Golf Club, Springfield, III., was elected vice president.

Gibson Lunt of Lakeshore Country Club in Rockford, N.Y., was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Like Hoag, Lunt is an association charter member.

NGCOA is a trade association for owners and operators of profit-oriented, public-access golf courses. Members include resort, semi-private and daily-fee facilities.

For further information, contact the National Golf Course Owners Association, 19 Exchange St., P.O. Box 1671, Charleston, S.C., 29402; 803-577-5239.

NGF EXPECTED TO REPLACE RUPP
Glenna Rupp has been dismissed as president and chief executive officer of Wilson Sporting Goods Co.,

His departure means a shaking up at the National Golf Foundation as well as at Wilson.

Rupp was recently named the chairman of the board at the NGF, which is headquartered in Jupiter, Fla.

NGF officials are now expected to replace him with Vice Chairman J. Charles, J. Yash, managing general and corporate vice president of the Golf Division of Spalding Sports Worldwide.

Other officers would move up in position, with Secretary Wally Uihlein, president of the Golf Course Owners Association, taking over the secretary duties. A new treasurer would be named.

MANAGEMENT COMPANY SOUGHT
KING CITY, Calif. — The city of King's Department of Parks and Recreation is soliciting qualified professional individuals and businesses for the complete operation and management of the King City golf course.

King is located in the heart of the Salinas Valley in Monterey County. The nine-hole par 70 course serves southern Monterey County and northern San Luis Obispo County. It includes a pro shop, snack bar, driving range, putting green and maintenance area. A cart storage shed was built in 1987.

Water is provided by an on-site well. Three fenced tennis courts are located at the golf course.

Commencement of operations is scheduled for July 1. Neil Smart is director of Parks and Recreation.

Course management company founded
HUDSON, Ohio — A new corporation has been founded to acquire and manage daily fee courses in selected areas of the United States.

Golf Courses of America, Inc. will buy existing daily fee courses throughout highly golf-populated areas.

Chief Executive Officer Brad Libin said, "The mission of Golf Courses of America is to acquire and operate quality facilities. With an emphasis on first-rate service and added value for players, we expect to capture the attention of golfers everywhere."

Libin, former chief executive officer of Golf Car International Corp., a Salt Lake City-based company that gives annual awards to the nation's top 900 golf courses, has assembled a team of experts in golf course acquisition and operations, marketing and financial services.

The company is pursuing targeted facilities with a plan to acquire the initial golf course by the end of May.

The management team has been involved with the PGA of America, National Golf Foundation and Superintendents Association of America.

Staubach: Team building key to success
By Peter Blais

Team building is the key to success in the club or any other business, according to former Dallas Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach.

"To be competitive you must have management and employees working together," said the keynote speaker during the opening business session at March's Club Managers Association of America Annual Conference in Dallas.

Without that attitude, a business will not be successful, regardless of its resources and talent, he said.

The two-time Super Bowl-winning quarterback said he learned the importance of team building during the 1971 football season. Despite having the most talent of any Cowboy team he played on, the 1971 squad stumbled to a 4-3 start and was in danger of not making the playoffs, Staubach said.

"The normal quarterback, Dickie, was the first to go during a team meeting following the seventh game. In no uncertain terms, Dickie told his fellow players they had all been playing as individuals, not as a team. That would stop immediately, he warned, or they would have to deal with him. Dickie's teammates respected and feared their tight end. One by one they stood and repeated his words. A team was forged during that meeting, Staubach said. "The Cowboys went on to win 10 straight games, including Dallas' first Super Bowl."

"This what it is for me attitude simply doesn't work in service industries," said the president of Staubach Co., a 130-employee commercial real estate firm.

"You need to encourage team builders. They are the top people in your organization. They are always ready to take advantage of an opportunity," Jeff Hostetler (the back-up quarterback who led the New York Giants to this year's Super Bowl) is a good example.

He has recognized the team builders in your organization? Staubach said they are often not the most talented employees, rather those who get the most out of their ability.

Former Cowboy wide receiver Drew Pearson was a team builder, Staubach said. Passed over as too small and too slow by teams in the National Football League Draft, Pearson signed as a free agent with the Cowboys. He went on to a spectacular career and was on the receiving end of the famous Hail Mary Pass against Minnesota that helped the Cowboys into the 1975 playoffs.

"He utilized his talents to the fullest of his capabilities," Staubach said. "And he persevered. You can't ever quit. Team players perform when times are tough. Adversity often reveals genius. Prosperity conceals it."

to take in its first Jewish member and installed an elevator to make the facility handicap-accessible.

"That (admitting Jews) was a big thing during the 1960s," said the new president of the Club Managers Association of America, a self-proclaimed small-town boy and graduate of Cornell University where the word discrimination was rarely heard. "I didn't realize people were so strongly about things like that."

From Binghamton he moved to the Rainier Club in Seattle in the late-1960s. When he first arrived, women had a separate entrance and were only allowed in certain parts of the club. One day a woman on crutches walked to the ladies' entrance and it was locked. She hobbled back around the corner and down a hill in the pouring rain to the men's entrance. The door man wouldn't let her in.

"I really thought he was going to get hit with the crutch," remembered Pearce. "A few days later there was an emergency board meeting and they did away with the ladies' entrance."

Pears said he managed the Little Rock (Ark.) Club in the mid-1970s while the board accepted its first black members. "This is the city where Eisenhower ordered in troops in the 1950s to desegregate the schools," Pearce said.

In the early 1980s he managed the Petroleum Club of Wichita — "one of the last bastions of male chauvinism," according to Pearce — when the board added its first female director.

Until three years ago women could not eat lunch in the main dining room of The Dallas Club, Pearce's present employer. The member changed the rule when they realized they couldn't close a business deal with a female client and then invite her to the club for lunch.

Just as in Binghamton, Seattle, Little Rock and Wichita, Pearce said: "That evolution came from within the club. It wasn't mandated. I firmly believe that was the right way to do it."

Increasing government intervention will be one of the major issues confronting club managers in the coming years, Pearce predicted.

"There will be more and more paperwork, recordkeeping for all the insurance problems, immigration and taxes," he said.

Then there is the change in the work force.

With the growing number of internationals migrating to the United States, "the white male worker is becoming a minority in the work place," Pearce said.

Competition for workers is becoming intense, especially in the food service sector of the club business. Jobs in hotels, restaurants and other hospitality businesses are dependent on the same labor pool. Unless clubs train them and offer incentives for them to stay, many workers will simply use clubs as a stepping stone on their way to other careers, the new CMAA president predicted.

"Chains have an edge in atmosphere and the
