National bluegrass test results confirm earlier findings

By Mark Leslie

Fifth-year results of the National Kentucky Bluegrass Test are complete and, in most cases, confirm the position of the better cultivars, according to the head of the project, Kevin Morris, national director of the National Turfgrass Evaluation Program. Said Morris, "Generally, after three to five years, if a variety still looks good, it is.

Morris said superintendents investigating the varieties should first look at those that performed in locations similar to their own. The 72 bluegrass varieties were tested at 24 sites around the United States and in Britain.
