GCSAA to conduct exclusive research
Withdraws funding slated for USGA
By MARK LESLIE
The Golf Course Superintendents Association of America has withdrawn financial support from United States Golf Association research programs to launch research projects of its own. The move was met with awe by some in the industry, but drew support from the USGA itself.

Jim Snow, national director of the USGA Green Section, said: "The GCSAA couldn't do its research without withdrawing funding from our program. They didn't pull out leaving us in the lurch... It wasn't a total surprise to me. They've expressed interest in doing some of these things for some time."

Saying that "in the end it won't affect what we do," Snow added: "In reality, more work will get done. I'm anxious to see the results of their work. We need all the information we can get."

USGA President Stuart Bloch said that although he did not like losing the funding, "I think it will work out fine."

Continued on page 30

Environmental liability at issue on finance front
By PETER BLAIS
Fleet Financial Group Inc. recently became the first major bank in the country to require nearly all major commercial real estate lenders to obtain environmental liability insurance before getting a loan, a move likely to be followed by other financial institutions that could add thousands of dollars to the cost of a golf course development.

The move was met with awe by some in the industry, but drew support from the USGA itself.

Jim Snow, national director of the USGA Green Section, said: "The GCSAA couldn't do its research without withdrawing funding from our program. They didn't pull out leaving us in the lurch... It wasn't a total surprise to me. They've expressed interest in doing some of these things for some time."

Saying that "in the end it won't affect what we do," Snow added: "In reality, more work will get done. I'm anxious to see the results of their work. We need all the information we can get."

USGA President Stuart Bloch said that although he did not like losing the funding, "I think it will work out fine."

Continued on page 33

Environmental liability at issue on finance front
By PETER BLAIS
Fleet Financial Group Inc. recently became the first major bank in the country to require nearly all major commercial real estate lenders to obtain environmental liability insurance before getting a loan, a move likely to be followed by other financial institutions that could add thousands of dollars to the cost of a golf course development.

The move was met with awe by some in the industry, but drew support from the USGA itself.

Jim Snow, national director of the USGA Green Section, said: "The GCSAA couldn't do its research without withdrawing funding from our program. They didn't pull out leaving us in the lurch... It wasn't a total surprise to me. They've expressed interest in doing some of these things for some time."

Saying that "in the end it won't affect what we do," Snow added: "In reality, more work will get done. I'm anxious to see the results of their work. We need all the information we can get."

USGA President Stuart Bloch said that although he did not like losing the funding, "I think it will work out fine."

Continued on page 33