Introducing: Two new editorial features for '94

Last year at this time, Golf Course News introduced three new features that appeared each month during 1993: "Tour of Duty," "Marketing Idea of the Month" and "Q&A" with architects in the news. All three features have been well received and will continue in 1994.

But the golf course market never stops changing, so we added two new features to keep pace.

The "USGA Off the Record" (get it?) is a monthly spotlight report appearing in the Maintenance section. Each report will discuss a specific piece of turfgrass research, conducted by universities and field stations across the nation, or an innovative maintenance technique.

USGA Green Section Director of Research Mike Kenna penned the first installment, which appears this month on page 41. He and other Green Section regional directors and staff will weigh in each month with scientific studies of interest to superintendent.

The second new feature, called "The Public Arena," will appear monthly at the newspaper's rear — where "On the Green" used to appear. (Don't worry, innovative equipment fans: "On the Green" has been moved to the Maintenance section, page 26.)

"The Public Arena" will concentrate on the stupendous growth of public-access golf in America. This month, we look at the city of Williamsburg, Va., which proves that municipalities can determine the nature of golf developments within its borders.

Hey, no offense intended... None taken?

Please, I don't mean to offend, but can anyone get through 24 hours nowadays without piercing someone's sensitivity?

The peoplehood of America is speaking up, it's silly and disgusting... It seems that someone from every fink and cranny, every tier of social strata and every ancestry thinks they have to be offended by something — anything. And if they're not offended, they should be, says the self-proclaimed spokesperson. It seems some are making careers out of being offended and finding their offense... well, offensive.

A group of African Americans stands before the television cameras and dispatch missiles against this, that and the other thing. At the University of Massachusetts, (pop. 23,000) a group of 30 protesters wants the school to change its nickname, the Minutemen, who has a musket resting on his thigh, is a white, gun-bearing male figure who promotes sexism, racism and violence. In 1972 UMass changed its name from Redmen because protesters said it opposed Native Americans.

This is emotional, intellectual tripe, causing divisiveness and anger. And it is being given credence.

Do we have nothing better to do in the United States than dig for reasons to get upset? Whatever happened to one nation under God, indissoluble, with liberty and justice for all? Oh, no, we've kicked God out of it, so now it's open season.

Are the French-speaking Northern Yankees up there in Canada where a National Hockey League team is called the Canucks? They don't seem upset. Maybe they don't need a CAUSE.

I've got Native American blood mixed in with Scottish and there is a bunch of people who think they can speak for me. They can spit out epithets against the Atlanta Braves, the Cleveland Indians, the Dalhousie Warriors. The tomahawk chop offends them. Give me a break, someone from every nation under God will be met here and there with the likes of protesters picketing the names of golf courses.

So, here's the bottom line. I think Golf Nation should be proactive here and beat these poor offended persons to the punch. Be thinking of what inoffensive name you can give your facility. But, in doing so, keep these aside (or is it broadside?) in mind:

- Beware of color references and cut out Indian (as in Indian) to avoid the native stereotype.
- Beware of names that are too racist, such as Minuteman.
- Beware of names that are offensive to people in different regions of the country. It's a big country.
- Beware of names that are offensive to certain groups, such as the Minuteman.

ASGCA HEAD TAKES ISSUE

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to tell you that Matthews & Associates, C.C.S. (or maybe Mr. Mathews) expect and appreciate the solid, concise golf information which Golf Course News provides. It is one of the few publications in the golf industry which is consistently read in our office. It always has been a magazine which maintains a certain level of credibility due to the accurate content of its articles.

Therefore, I feel it necessary to express my views regarding your recent article, "Best Architect of the Year," "Best Builder of the Year," etc. Your publication has the distinction of serving the entire United States. Keeping this in mind, I find it next to impossible for your respondents to determine the "Best in any category. The respondents cannot possibly realize how a company or architect or builder has traveled throughout the entire United States to evaluate with any consistency the "Best courses, architects, or builders. Each respondent will, of course, be biased towards his/her geographic location and as such the votes in each category will reflect this.

In addition, I feel these surveys tend to be more politically motivated and less reflective of actual talents/designs. Many lesser known courses, designers, and builders are overlooked, not because of their achievements but, because of their lack of votes, due mainly to lack of name recognition acquired through large publicity programs. Thank you for taking the time to review my comments and I look forward to hearing from you.

Jerry Matthews
ASGCA president

MORE DAILY-FEE ATTENTION

To the Editor:

I had the pleasure of attending your Public Golf 1993 Conference at Wild Dunes. I congratulate you and your organization on a very professional conference with great speakers and wel organized material.

I am looking forward to next year and I would like to make one suggestion: That considerable time be given to the upscale, daily-fee facilities. This type of operation needs to be separate from the resort and other daily-fee operations. Again, congratulations on a great conference. Looking forward to seeing you in Orlando.

President and general manager

Jack Nicklaus Sports Center
Mason, Ohio

Ed. Thanks for the positive input. Next year in Orlando, Golf Course News will sponsor Golf Course Expo, an exhibition and three-track conference. Because we've expanded the education program to include Management, Development and Agronomy tracks, we do plan to concentrate on more specific aspects of the public-access golf market, including upscale daily-fee facilities.

To the Editor:

I fully enjoy reading Golf Course News. The information is always timely, thought provoking and useful. The Regional News section, however, does not include information from the south central region of the country (Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Missouri and Alabama). I would appreciate information from this area.

Earl A. Tonjes
GM, Old Cross Bayou Club

Ed. You're right. We depend on state superintendent associations and various other groups to provide us with information for this section. Frankly, we don't get very much from any of these states, with the exception of Texas. We'll try harder if folks in this region do, too.
