Phillips comment
Continued from previous page classic design features, not his overblown, near-mythical obsession with the penal and outlandish. As Pete would be quick to tell you, most of his "devilish" features — among them his forbidding, wooden bunker facades and closely shaved, steeply pitched aprons — are standard fare on countless Scottish courses. You would think with a guy with a new book ("Bury Me in a Pot Bunker," which I read and liked) and an American Express commercial would work for a large measure of his charm.
