Mississippi's coast eyed by developers

By PETER BLAIR

GULFPORT, Miss. — Local DGA officials expect a developer to announce plans this month to build one or two golf courses along the Mississippi coast, a move that will help diversify the area's casino gambling-dominated economy.

"We've had three groups looking at the marketplace so far and expect three more this month," consultant Donald Wizeman said in early December. "One group wanted to buy an existing facility and a second was still looking for financing. The third group proposed taking two of the six primary sites we want to develop and would like right of first refusal on the other four. We're negotiating right now and I expect something to be signed by the end of January."

Harrison County Development Commission Executive Director Michael Olivier said: "We're looking at $4 million to $5 million signature courses. We need some good tracks for the area to emerge as a major golf destination. We hope to have five or six projects get underway this year and be on line sometime in 1996."

Florida Cabinet nixes Ross course in favor of park

By MARK LESLIE

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Jacksonville citizens, city councilors, state legislators and golfers lost a major vote by a "fame-duck" state Cabinet, which unanimously voted to retain Ft. George Island exclusively as a state park. The Jacksonville City Council had set aside $1 million to refurbish the Donald Ross-designed golf course, and support was strong from citizens who pointed out that merely 67 acres would be maintained. But after 20 minutes of speeches from both sides, including opponents Friends of Fort George Island and the Florida Audubon Society, the governor and Cabinet voted without debate.

"I'm still in shock," said proponent John

Jack Kidwell: 'Retire' not in his vocabulary

Jack Kidwell, a scratch golfer, Class A golf professional, golf course superintendent and award-winning designer, Jack Kidwell has been one of the most prominent, knowledgeable and respected men in Ohio golf for the past six decades. Kidwell, now in his mid-70s and living in Columbus, is a former member of the PGA, a past president and lifetime fellow of both the American Society of Golf Course Architects and Golf Course Superintendents Association of America. He started caddying at age 7, worked on a grounds crew at 16, bought the nine-hole Beacon Light Golf Course with his father and ran it at 19, and, in 1958, designed his first 18-hole course at 39. Since then he's designed or renovated more than 100 courses. His design practices have since been bought out by protege Dr. Michael Harzdan, but he remains active.

Golf Course News: Did your early experiences with golf, i.e. as a caddie in the 1920s shape your ideas about golf and golf course design?

Jack Kidwell: I'm from a different age than golf today. The changes in golf have been so dramatic I think sometimes I've been left behind. I've done a lot of work that's been well accepted but I do find it hard to think of spending $8, $10, $20 million to build a golf course. All I remember about my caddy days was that it was hotter than blue blazes and I was tired. I do think I did learn a lot about human character. A lot of fellas that play golf show what they're made of when they're playing.

GCN: When did you start playing golf?

VALLEJO, Calif. — Sky Valley San Francisco, L.P. and its general partner, Misawa Homes of America Inc., the owner of approximately one-half of a 1,339-acre subdivision located here, known as “Sky Valley,” has settled all claims with the master developer, Sky Valley Limited Partnership. The settlement comes almost two and a half years after the parties began litigation over breach of contract and construction claims in excess of $100 million in Solano County Superior Court. The two parties were eventually moved into binding arbitration starting in November 1993. Under the terms of the settlement, the parties will move forward and complete the development, which includes an 18-hole golf course designed by Arnold Palmer.

Jacksonville loses circa 1920s Ross golf course

Supporters of the course hope to find more supportive listeners in the new Cabinet which includes four new members who stepped into their jobs on Jan. 3. Any member of the Cabinet can offer a motion to rescind a previous action of the Cabinet.

The Cabinet’s vote was on the so-called 210 Plan which requests $4 million to build the infrastructure for such “passive recreation” as hiking and bird watching.

“We have an abundance of nature trails in Duval County. There are 58,000 acres of state park adjacent to Fort George Island, and we only want 67 acres for greens, tees and fairways,” King said. “Plus, their plan asks for another $4 million ... and we already have $2 million to restore the golf course.”

Opponents, said golf course architect and Jacksonville resident Bobby Weed, “used the same old, typical environmentalists’ fear and sensationalism tactics about the water, contamination, leaching.”

Billy Arnold of Friends of Fort George Island told the Cabinet the 250-acre island is too small to support both a golf course and state park, according to The Florida Times-Union.

Golf historians have pointed to the fact that nine of the course’s 18 holes were designed in the 1920s by Ross, one of the most famous course architects in the world.

The island had been clearcut and turned into a cotton plantation long ago, and construction of the course rejuvenated it. Now, a treasure will be lost, they say.

The state bought the island in 1989 and gave Jacksonville an interim-use agreement allowing the city to continue operating the golf course property.

But in 1981 Mayor Ed Austin said the course was too expensive to maintain, and it was closed.
