Did you know?... Orlando was originally named Jernigan, after an early South Georgia settler.
Work of Historical Preservation Committee on display in Orlando

FARHILLS, N. J. — The Historical Preservation Committee of the Golf Course Superintendents Association of America (GCSAA) has developed recommendations aimed at bringing continuity and permanence to GCSAA’s historical preservation initiative.

Meeting at the headquarters of the United States Golf Association (USGA) here this winter, the committee also reviewed tasks completed in the past year.

Since the group last met in October 1994, its status changed from resource group to an official GCSAA standing committee. This change will create stability for the continuation of the group. Also in the past year, the Historical Preservation Committee:

- Established a historical display at GCSAA’s 66th International Golf Course Conference & Show in San Francisco.
- Videotaped interviews with key senior members of the association.
- Archived all copies of Golf Course Management magazine and its predecessors.
- Documented the historical items stored at GCSAA headquarters in Lawrence, Kan.
- Began a book on the history of the association.
- Introduced industry partners and manufacturers to the historical preservation initiative.
- Ties with the USGA were strengthened with regard to preserving the common history of both associations.

Takes under consideration by the committee were the ideas of developing articles of incorporation, creating a more detailed strategic plan and committee standards operating procedure and increasing funding allocations through the budget.

“When I need a reliable straight shot, I reach for my Putter.”

“There’s nothing like making a great putt. How the ball takes a smooth roll on a closely trimmed green. Over a texture so fine, nothing’s going to get in the way of my shot. “That’s why I reach for Putter from Jacklin. A dark, bluish-green Creeping Bentgrass, Putter has a uniform leaf texture, improved resistance to many patch diseases and is aggressive against Poa annua encroachment. And its dwarf-growth habit and high-shoot density puts me in a better position to call those tough shots. “In fact, in test after test, Putter offers a true-line putting surface that outperforms the competition. (Now, if I could only outperform my competition, game after game.)”
