Course a day? That's chicken feed

By HAL PHILLIPS

More than 400 golf courses opened for play across the United States in 1995, a one-year record that will likely stand for a mere 12 months. The National Golf Foundation (NGF) projects between 400 and 500 new facilities will come on line during 1996, as more than 700 courses are under construction and financing options abound.

"The majority of openings are occurring in the heartland," said Rick Norton, the NGF's vice president of operations. "This region benefits from the highest participation rates in the country, and it has relatively inexpensive land. That's what I like to call a golf-sustaining culture."

Continued on page 46

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>New openings</th>
<th>9-hole</th>
<th>18-hole</th>
<th>Total</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Daily-Fee</td>
<td>86</td>
<td>99</td>
<td>185</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Municipal</td>
<td>12</td>
<td>22</td>
<td>34</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Private</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>19</td>
<td>25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Totals</td>
<td>104</td>
<td>140</td>
<td>244</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Expansions</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Daily-Fee</td>
<td>84</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>92</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Municipal</td>
<td>18</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Private</td>
<td>24</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>126</td>
<td>13</td>
<td>139</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Grand total</td>
<td>230</td>
<td>153</td>
<td>383</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

* Source: National Golf Foundation (through Oct. 5, 1995)

Like father...

Bruce Williams (left), superintendent at Bob O'Link in Chicago, will assume the GCSAA presidency next month, following in the footsteps of father Robert Williams (right), who led the association in the late 1950s. For the story on this dynamic, dedicated father-son duo, see page 15.

PGA aims for new management standard at Reserve

By MARK LESLIE

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. — "Automatic adrenaline." That's how the head golf professional describes the PGA of America's new home golf course.

"It's a showplace," Bill Cioffi said of PGA Golf Club at The Reserve which opened here Jan. 1. "Our mission is to meet and exceed the expectations of every golfer who comes through here."

To achieve that mission, Cioffi and boss Marty Kavanaugh, two acclaimed PGA golf professionals, brought together a core group of pros from a cross-section of the best merchandising facilities. They drafted a training program... sat down with course architect Tom Fazio and clubhouse architect Ward/Flora... worked with Club Car to design a state-of-the-art golf car storage structure and with superintendent Rick Wise and Toro to build a user- and environment-friendly maintenance facility. And, voilà! When the world welcomed in the Year 1996, it also welcomed what the PGA hopes will soon be a model for the country.

Continued on page 36

Myrtle Beach to hit century mark amid oversupply fears

By PETER BLAIS

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. — One would think the opening of the 100th course here sometime this year would be cause for celebration. But for some, it's a matter of concern.

Even with a healthy surge of golfers visiting Myrtle Beach, the eight additional courses scheduled to open this spring may mean fewer rounds per person and smaller profits, according to figures provided by the Myrtle Beach Tourism Coalition, a local group comprising tourism industry representatives.

According to the Coalition's 1994 figures, golfers played 3.8 million rounds here, an average of 44,186 rounds per course. If 1996 projections are confirmed, the average drops to 32,400 rounds per course.

Continued on page 35

ARBOR CARE

Tree maintenance is best accomplished in late winter/early spring, so now is the time to start planning your pruning strategy. For the first in a two-part series on tree care, see page 15.

LGCSA BYLAWS

Membership vote takes center stage

By PETER BLAIS

ORLANDO — Two proposed bylaw changes — one requiring head superintendents to belong to both their national and state associations, and a second setting assistant superintendent dues at half the fee charged head superintendents — will be on the ballot at February's GCSAA Annual Meeting here.

The first change would require all head superintendents joining a state or regional chapter after July 1, 1997, to also join the national association. Assistant superintendents, affiliates and other members would be exempted from the dual-membership requirement.

Continued on page 23
400 courses in '95

Continued from page 1

Indeed, of the six most development-intensive states, five can be found in the Midwest: Michigan (22 openings), Ohio (18), Minnesota (17), Illinois (16), and Wisconsin (15). The second tier includes Sun Belt states like California, Florida and Georgia, where resort and residential scenarios drove the market.

Public-access golf facilities — daily-fee, municipal and resort — confirmed their dominance of the golf course market last year. Of the 383 courses that opened for play between Jan. 1 and Oct. 5, all but 53 were public-access. Nearly 20 percent of the country's 15,000-plus courses are now daily-fee, municipal or resort, as the number of private courses continues to decline — by 9 percent since 1990.

Continued public-access development in the Midwest bodes particularly well for an industry looking to diversify geographically and economically.

The heartland states have been able to provide a range of facilities, not just the high-end variety," Norton explained. "I think that's some of the reason why it has led the way over the past few years and will continue to lead the way... We expect 400 to 500 courses to open this year, and they will follow a similar geographic pattern."

Course openings have now increased every year this decade, with another record number projected for 1996. There are currently 740 courses under construction (see chart at left) and another 500 in the planning stages.

While development growth signals a strong industry — not to mention more job opportunities for superintendents, architects and managers — it also signals increased competition for courses that couldn't compete for the industry, as experienced operators have deemed it fruitful to add on. Of course, that leaves 244 new facilities, whose operators are as yet unproven.

"Are they good operators with experience, or are they people who are enamored of golf and living a dream?" Hughes quipped. "We'll find out soon enough. The weaker members of the market will turn over and good, experienced managers will come in. This will definitely help the management companies."

Indeed, management firms have enjoyed steady times during the '90s, snapping up older courses that couldn't compete with new ones, and gobbling up newer facilities that couldn't meet their debt services. Look for more to fatten the portfolios of eager management firms.

Experienced or not, the prospective course owner is making a compelling case to financiers.

"When I see a pro forma on a deal, I'm seeing better margins projected on these projects — and that draws out the money," said Don Rhodes of Atlanta-based NationsCredit, formerly Greenock Financial. "Three or four years ago, it was hard to make that believable. But you can't just talk about rounds any more. You have to talk about green fees and construction costs. Look for more to fatten the portfolios of eager management firms.

Experienced or not, the prospective course owner is making a compelling case to financiers.

"When I see a pro forma on a deal, I'm seeing better margins projected on these projects — and that draws out the money," said Don Rhodes of Atlanta-based NationsCredit, formerly Greenock Financial. "Three or four years ago, it was hard to make that believable. But you can't just talk about rounds any more. You have to talk about green fees and construction costs. Look for more to fatten the portfolios of eager management firms.

Experienced or not, the prospective course owner is making a compelling case to financiers.

"When I see a pro forma on a deal, I'm seeing better margins projected on these projects — and that draws out the money," said Don Rhodes of Atlanta-based NationsCredit, formerly Greenock Financial. "Three or four years ago, it was hard to make that believable. But you can't just talk about rounds any more. You have to talk about green fees and construction costs. Look for more to fatten the portfolios of eager management firms.

Experienced or not, the prospective course owner is making a compelling case to financiers.

"When I see a pro forma on a deal, I'm seeing better margins projected on these projects — and that draws out the money," said Don Rhodes of Atlanta-based NationsCredit, formerly Greenock Financial. "Three or four years ago, it was hard to make that believable. But you can't just talk about rounds any more. You have to talk about green fees and construction costs. Look for more to fatten the portfolios of eager management firms.

Experienced or not, the prospective course owner is making a compelling case to financiers.

"When I see a pro forma on a deal, I'm seeing better margins projected on these projects — and that draws out the money," said Don Rhodes of Atlanta-based NationsCredit, formerly Greenock Financial. "Three or four years ago, it was hard to make that believable. But you can't just talk about rounds any more. You have to talk about green fees and construction costs. Look for more to fatten the portfolios of eager management firms.