Arthur Hills designing his 1st course in England...

WATFORD, England — The golf course architectural firm Arthur Hills and Associates will design its first British project here northwest of London.

Ground has not yet been broken on The Grove at Watford, a proposed 18-hole resort course. Developed by The Ralph Trust, The Grove project remains in the permitting process.

The par-72 course has been routed on rolling terrain along the River Gade and in close proximity to the Grand Union Canal. At press time, developers still owed presentations to the environmental groups English Heritage and British Waterways.

Paragon reorganizes management team

NORTH PALM BEACH, Fla.—Paragon Golf Construction, Inc. has announced its new corporate management team. John Boyd was named president of the specialized construction company.

Other executives appointed at Paragon Golf & Construction include: Sal Rodriguez, vice president of western North America and Latin America; John Copeland, vice president of eastern North America and Canada; Chris Curbello, operations and project controls manager and John Mueller, vice president of business development.

Boyd brings more than 17 years of experience in the areas of commercial and mixed-use projects. He has been with Paragon since October 1996 as chief operating officer. Beforehand, he was vice president and country operating officer. Beforehand, he was vice president and country manager for Parsons International Limited.

"Our overall goal at Paragon is to provide quality work for your clients in the areas that we specialize in, namely project management and golf course construction. We plan to dominate in these services for resort and golf-related developments," said Boyd.
