Eger ascends Golf Services Group's career ladder
By PETER BLAIS

Remaining flexible enough to seize opportunities and travel where those opportunities took her has been the key to Paula Eger's success.

Golf Services Group's director of golf course maintenance and agronomy has traveled the world and worked with numerous companies during her 20-plus-year golf industry career.

"You have to stay flexible and find quality people to work with," said the 44-year-old executive with the Houston-based development/management firm. [President] Jim Hardy has always given me the support I needed, but also given me the freedom to make my own decisions."

Golf has always been a part of Eger's life. Her childhood home bordered the second fairway at Greenbriar Hills near St. Louis. With her family's encouragement, she became a successful junior golfer and rode that skill to the University of Arizona, where she played on the school's golf team.

Eger wanted to design golf courses.

Everybody needs a Paul O'Brien
By VINCE ALFONSO

Eger ascends Golf Services Group's career ladder.

But, some golf organizations that have all this still don't make it. Why? Maybe it has to do with something as fundamental as sayin' "Hi, glad to see you" and meanin' it.

I have to admit, I have never read Sam Walton's book. But, I'm sure that somewhere in that book, Sam talked about why he wanted a greeter at the front door of every WalMart store. He or someone on the WalMart team decided it would be good for business. In other words, they believed it would be good for the bottom line to have somebody say, "Good Morning" or "Good Afternoon" or "Good Evening", and shake the hand of every single customer, every single time they came through the door of a WalMart store.

I can't claim some revelation from studying the masters of marketing and sales, but as ya'll are keenly aware (if you read my column monthly), I did study under my dad, who I believe to be an unpublished master. So I guess I knew how important greeting your customer was, because I saw my Dad do it. He taught me by his example just how important sayin' "Hi, glad to see you" really was. I have always encouraged my employees to follow my lead in this area, but I prayed I would someday find someone who truly understood its importance the way my Dad did.

In late spring 1983, my prayers were answered when a gentleman named Paul O'Brien made an appointment to see me.

Golf Services

GSG provides course owners and developers with five related services: project and construction management, golf course operations and maintenance, advisory, design and renovation services.

The company currently manages or will build/manage nine projects — five under development and four that have already opened. In addition to the 40-year leases on Tennessee state park facilities at Cumberland Mountain (Crossville, opening October), Harrison Bay (Chattanooga, opening 1998), Tim's Ford (Winchester, opening 1998 or 1999) and Chickasaw (opening 1999), GSG projects include:

- Managing Rio Colorado GC, Bay City, Texas, for developer Charles Hurwitz.
- Managing Waterwood National CC, Huntsville, Texas, for developer Allstate Insurance Co.
- Building an exclusive, 18-hole Rees Jones-designed private club for the Houstonian Hotel and Athletic Club in Houston.
- Starting construction this summer on a GSG-developed, 18-hole, Peter Jacobsen/Jim Hardy-designed course in Houston.
- Completing the first nine this summer and starting construction soon on another 18 GSG-designed holes at Green Hills GC in Chowchilla, Calif.
- Project managing an 18-hole, Jacobsen/Hardy-designed private club called The Oaks in Nicholas, Calif., that should open in early 1998.

Hardy, an Oklahoma State University graduate with more than 30 years of golf industry experience, founded Golf Services in 1987 as a consulting company that offered, at that time, an unusual product — short-term, project-management contracts.

"Most real-estate developers," Hardy recalled, "wanted professional help, but could only get it through long-term management contracts. We offered short-term arrangements, as little as 60 to 90 days, if that was what was needed."

The consulting part of the business grew, with organizations like Levantool & Horwath and the U.S. Army and Air Force contracting Golf Services to conduct feasibility, market and other financial studies. Eventually GSG evolved into a more traditional management firm specializing in the development of new projects rather than acquisitions.

"We're very experienced in taking a course from the initial development stages through opening and into daily operation," Hardy said. "We're not a turnaround company or mass marketer. We are very entrepreneurial and very hands-on."

Hardy relies heavily on a professional staff that includes partner Bill Wallace, a Certified Public Accountant, who directs the company's financial reporting and accounting functions. GSG and Jacobsen/Hardy Design Group, a sister firm, also benefit from the input of Jacobsen, LPGA golfer Carol Mann, Director of Golf Course Maintenance and Agronomy Paula Eger, design associate Shari Doiron, General Manager Nancy Bunton and Vice President of Project Development Carl Brown.

As for the future, Hardy sees the golf course management industry continuing to grow and consolidate, although he predicts Golf Services will neither be acquired by a larger firm nor acquire other management firms.

"We don't have any ambition to become the next ClubCorp," the company president said. "We'd like to have 10 to 20 courses eventually, with an equity position in each. And we'll likely develop them ourselves. Although we're open to acquiring an existing course, finding the right one at a good price is tough to do. When you know what you're doing, development is a wise thing. Why buy someone else's mistakes."
