Golf and the Environment
New Audubon International column debuts: Biological diversity comes into focus

Spotlight on Asia
Anti-golf activists are taking bold strides to halt development in the Asian market

TPC ON THE RISE
WEISKOPF SURVEYS HIS FIRST TRACK IN MICH.
"You are only limited by your imagination," said PGA Tour great and golf course architect Tom Weiskopf, center, shown looking over the site for his design at Shanty Creek Resort in Bellaire, Mich. Weiskopf is flanked by his shaper Bob McClure, left, and Don Richards of golf course builder H&D, Inc. It is Weiskopf's first design in the Wolverine State. See story, page 26.

The Tournament Players Club (TPC) at Scottsdale (Ariz.) above is among the growing stable of Tournament Players Club courses operated by the PGA Tour. See story on new TPC, pg. 23

COURSE MAINTENANCE
Study finds little impact from dicamba, 2,4-D
Joe Ondo, a working superintendent
Focus on non-traditional employee relations

COURSE DEVELOPMENT
Old Head sparkles on Emerald Isle
Skill Golf Links — a brand new approach
Sanford busy around the globe

COURSE MANAGEMENT
Graham Cooke on the ball in Maritimes
NGP snags 50% of Pumpkin Ridge
Granite agrees with two more courses

SUPPLIER BUSINESS
DowElanco to change name
RohMid's Mach 2 granted state registrations
Ransomes lands exclusive deal in China

Stormwater runoff battle rages on in Fla.
By J. BARRY MOTHES
SARASOTA, Fla. — A group of 27 Sarasota golf courses continues to battle the Sarasota County government over stormwater runoff assessment bills that have cost some courses as much as $46,000 per year and in some cases seriously threatened their survival.

The courses, organized as the Suncoast Golf Course Association, say the rates are far too high and unfair when compared to lower rates assessed to other agricultural-related operations in the counties like farms, nurseries and pastures. The group has filed two lawsuits over the stormwater assessment issue which are still pending.

One challenges the level of the assessment rate. The other seeks a rebate for what the golf courses contend is excess money they have paid in assessment rates for the past two years.

Stormwater runoff assessments became a hot issue for the Sarasota-area courses starting in 1995 when turf areas became subject to assessments. Prior to that, the courses paid assessments that related only to parking lots and other non-turf areas. The new rates, approved by the county's Board of

Toro looks toward '99
By M. LEVANS
BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — The Toro Co. and Pinehurst Resort and Country Club, in cooperation with Pinehurst Championship Management, have inked a multi-year agreement that makes Toro the preferred golf course maintenance equipment and irrigation supplier for the Resorts and Pinehurst in North Carolina.

Under the new agreement, Toro will provide

Cart-path rule gets its day in court
By ROB SPITWAK
AN incident at Lassing Pointe Golf Course in northern Kentucky may have far reaching implications for the future of "The Cart-Path Rule" around the country. Involving a handicapped golfer, the situation was resolved in October after a year and a half of controversy.

Don Duckworth of Covington, Ky., had a heart attack in 1993. He was not expected to live. Two years later, he had open-heart surgery twice and survived. His doctor told him he asked for an exemption from the rule. A once-a-week player with a 16 handicap, he explained that his disability would not allow him to leave the cart and walk up to 60 yards on sometimes hilly terrain. The course refused his request because of what it considered tender turf and suggested he play at the other municipal course 11 miles away.
Cart-path rule

Continued from page 1

Duckworth went before the Boone County authorities, who likewise refused his request. Golfer and golf course dug in their heels.

Duckworth contacted Greg Jones, founder and president of The Association of Disabled American Golfers. A polio victim at age three, Jones became an avid golfer despite being limited to crutches and in 1992 formed the organization. Today it has more than 700 members, including most major golf industry organizations.

"I told him," said Jones, "Don't just sit there. Seek advice and you don't need to pay an attorney." Jones told him he had protection under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). He suggested Duckworth file a grievance with the Department of Justice.

After his request was refused in an exchange of letters to county authorities. Duckworth went before Boone County, and opened for play in 1994. Because the turf was still relatively new, the course’s cart-path rule was strictly enforced. When Duckworth returned to play in early 1996

Lassing Pointe is one of two courses operated by Boone County. It was completed in 1993. A grassed route, the course was turned over to the county and opened for play in 1994. It was operated by Boone County. It was completed in 1993. A grassed route, the course was turned over to the county and opened for play in 1994.

Continued from page 35

the course would allow Duckworth to deviate from the path. He ruled that its other course would allow Duckworth to play golf.

According to Andre, the county wrote to him advising that it would comply with the Department of Justice.

"The act requires that all state and local programs be available to people with disabilities," said Andre, "unless providing access would cause undue burden, like financial, or alter the nature of the program, in this case the game of golf.

Andre communicated with the county, which held that based upon advice from the USGA and the course architect, the turf course was not complete and could be damaged by carts deviating from the path. Andre went to the course for an on-site inspection. As Duckworth only golfed once a week, Andre argued, how much damage could carts do, especially in light of daily tractor, mower and utility cart traffic. The county responded that its other course would allow Duckworth to deviate from the path.

"We found," said Andre, "that each course is unique. That's why people play golf. Along with this, Mr. Duckworth was playing in a league at Lassing Pointe. He ruled that the course would "...have to allow this reasonable modification [driving off the path] to allow the man to play golf."

"The golf industry is changing dramatically. If you have only golf experience and don't know how the golf industry mixes into general business management, you could lose out. "The Mom-and-Pop operations are starting to reach the point where they are consolidating, just like the local department stores started to become parts of large chains. We don't want to take away the atmosphere of the small operation. We just want to add the resources that are available through consolidation."

Pro shop and clubhouse changes were set to begin in early September. Allen said, "of golf experience and experience in other businesses — hospitality, service, real estate, management and acquisitions."

"The golf industry is changing dramatically. If you have only golf experience and don't know how the golf industry mixes into general business management, you could lose out.

"The Mom-and-Pop operations are starting to reach the point where they are consolidating, just like the local department stores started to become parts of large chains. We don't want to take away the atmosphere of the small operation. We just want to add the resources that are available through consolidation."

"When we're done it will be completely redeveloping. We don't want to take away the atmosphere of the small operation. We just want to add the resources that are available through consolidation."

First in Versatility, Dependability, and Reliability

AERA-vator®

"The AERA-vator has been one of the most vital pieces of equipment for our golf course. With the steady use of golf carts, there are turf areas that are completely worn down to the point of survival. The AERA-vator has proven time and time again how well it works in breaking up compaction. Without a question one of the best purchases we have ever made."

— Kirk Henry, Supt. Balcones Country Club, Austin, Texas

First Products Inc., Tifton, GA
1-800-363-8780, From GA call 912-382-4768

Capitol Golf

Continued from page 35

Continued on page 46
Cart-path rule

Continued from page 38

far away," said Andre, who advised the county that his agency was "taking steps" to refer the matter back to the Department of Justice for action.

Jim Collins, Boone County administrator, said: "They [National Park Service] did not want to hear any of our arguments. No appeals were allowed. The course is at the end of its fourth year and we have reports from the dean of the University (Kentucky) ag school and from the University of Georgia that cart traffic could damage the course. We were looking at five to seven years [to allow the turf to mature].

"We have two courses in the county," he continued, "The older course allows golfers to go off the cart paths. Both the ADA Resource Center and the Department of Justice said that this accommodation was under the letter and spirit of the law."

In a mid-October conversation with Boone County attorney Larry Crigler, he advised that, "The matter is probably going to be settled. The course will close for the year in two weeks and the course will be made accessible to Mr. Duckworth when it re-opened in April 1998." He went on to explain that the date of compliance, 1999, originally stated by the county, was a "typographical error."

Duckworth feels his cause has finally been vindicated. "I went to the papers with all the correspondence," he said, "and I think that, and the fact that it is an election year coming up, along with the threat of action by the Justice Department is what got the county to agree." He is skeptical about the typographical error.

Jones is happy with the outcome as well. "We are not in business to promote the handicapped," he noted. "We promote the game, and are advocates for full inclusion of everyone who wants to play golf."

Canadian participation

Continued from page 8

1990) their participation rate has remained flat at 15% and is heavily skewed toward higher income families.

The survey reveals, however, that Western Canada, which has long established junior programs, enjoys extremely strong participation among 12-17 year olds, with the Prairie provinces showing a 28% participation rate and British Columbia 21%

"The game and the overall [Canadian] industry has enjoyed a solid participation rate over the past seven years," says MacDonald. "Our challenge now is to increase the [current] 19% rate to 20% or 25% by creating national junior golf development programs that are accessible and affordable like the RCGA's Future Links. Without programs to introduce and keep people in the game, the industry will have trouble maintaining or increasing what it has right now."

Among other findings in the 1996 Golf Participation in Canada Survey report:

• Annual rounds played in Canada increased between 1990 and 1996 about 26% from 53 million to 67.3 million. In the U.S. over the same period, they've remained level at about 480 million a year.

• Canadian golfers average 14 rounds per year ... as compared to 19.3 for U.S. golfers.

• 347,000 Canadians started playing golf in 1996 ... vs. 2 million in the U. S.

The RCGA, the governing body of men's amateur golf in Canada, determines national policies and standards relating to the game on behalf of its more than 235,000 members.

Copies of the report can be purchased through the RCGA's membership development department at 905-849-9700.

However, the activists admit that the recent economic downturn in Asia has had more to do with the lack of development than with their ability to convince the public that golf course development is not viable.

While this may mean bad news for perspective developers and the existing golf courses, it also means that the anti-golf activists have for the most part ceased operations since they sense no impending crisis. It is their belief that Asian economies have no more room left for golf development.

Certainly, the issues surrounding golf course development in Asia are already extremely complex, and GAGM and GNAGA seek to add to this complexity. While there may be certain elements of truth in their arguments, their rigid ideology does not allow for compromise—so their arguments get lost amongst their rhetoric of hysteria and misinformation. Following these discussions, I began to have nightmares that the courses I was planning to visit were being taken over by pitchfork wielding farmers seeking to reverse economic injustice.

Fortunately, after a mind-cleansing visit to a local Bangkok driving range, I was once again able to dream of lush Asian courses in natural surroundings.