DowElanco to become Dow AgroSciences

INDIANAPOLIS — Effective January 1, 1998, DowElanco will be known as Dow AgroSciences, a move the company said reflects the venture’s new status as a wholly-owned subsidiary of The Dow Chemical Company.

The name change follows a June announcement by The Dow Chemical Co. that it would acquire Eli Lilly and Co.'s 44 percent interest in the joint venture — the two companies joined their plant science businesses to form DowElanco in 1989.

“This is an industry that is rapidly reinventing itself,” said John Hagaman, DowElanco president and chief executive officer. “Our new name reflects a broad sense of our mission that has been inherent in our strategic planning for a number of years. As a result, our company’s investment in technologies of the future is funded and supported by traditional pest control products, so that both our older and newer businesses provide a platform for growth.”

The company said it will stick to its goal of commercializing one significant new product a year. The latest for the turf industry was Conserve SC, a turf and ornamental insect control.

IMC, UHS firm deal in Fla.

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. — IMC Vigoro announced a new business alliance with UHS of Tampa, Fla., to represent IMC Vigoro’s turf fertilizer products throughout the state of Florida.

The alliance calls for UHS to market and sell Par cx fertilizers, containing IBDU slow release nitrogen and V-Cote controlled release nitrogen and potash to golf course superintendents and lawn care/landscape companies.

Steve Jackson, Gulf states division manager for UHS, will head up the UHS sales team.

“We are very excited about distributing for IMC Vigoro. The Par cx brand has already established an excellent reputation and we intend to grow the business,” said Jackson.

UHS, which has six sales offices in Florida (Delray Beach, Ft. Pierce, Hastings, Immokalee, Parrish, and Waverly), markets to the golf course and lawn care/landscape turf care industries.

“UHS brings over 5 1/2 years of industry experience to our sales force,” said Bill Foster, director of the professional business unit at IMC Vigoro. “The alliance will strengthen our distribution capabilities in Florida.”
