

Name that job title: Superintendent? Greenkeeper? Course manager?

By TERRY BUCHEN

Va. — It seems inevitable in the not-too-distant future that the superintendent's job title will permanently change and the subsequent re-naming of our national and local professional organizations will change as well. That is, if the past Golf Course Superintendents Association of America (GCSAA) history and natural evolution of time are any indication.

The National Association of Greenkeepers of America (NAGA) was founded in 1926. It changed its name to the Greenkeeping Superintendents Association (GSA) in 1938. In 1948, the association name was changed to the National Greenkeeping Superintendents Association (NGSA). And in 1951 the current Golf Course Superintendents Association of America (GCSAA) name was penned. Our professional trade magazine has also changed names over the years, reflecting mostly on our desired job title and status in the golf community. It started as the National Greenkeeper in 1927, changing to The Greenkeepers' Bulletin in July 1933, The Greenkeepers' Reporter in August 1933, The

Golf Course Reporter in 1951, Golf Course Superintendent in 1966 and the current Golf SAVVY SUPERINTENDENT

Course Management in 1979.

The GCSAA and the local chapters have done a good job promoting the Golf Course Superintendents job title over the years by trying to get away from the "Greenkeeper" title usage as much as the public will participate. The media, in many cases, tries to use the superintendent title even though the inevitable Greenkeeper title still is used and most likely will never go away in the public's eye.

The golf course superintendent title is still being used extensively, both at publicaccess and private clubs. But, beginning in the 1980s, the titles by which superintendents desire to be addressed have steadily upgraded. Most notably among them are golf course manager and director of golf course maintenance. The golf course manager title reflects nicely with the current name of our trade magazine, while the director of golf course maintenance title reflects the current administrative leaning to the position. Our competitive nature as golf professionals is reflected by the director of golf title. We feel it is only fitting that we are treated as at least equals with a "director" title.

Job titles are used on a caseby-case basis at each golf course in the United States and Canada, depending on the internal chain of command and desired organizational chart.

So, will whatever title is chosen eventually be used in the associations' names? Our associations' new acronym should be as short, distinctive and catchy as possible. A good example is the PGA. Will it be changed to the Golf Course Managers Association of America (GCMAA); the Directors of Golf Course Maintenance Association of America (DGCMAA); National Golf Course Managers Association of America (NGCMAA); National Golf Course Managers of America (NGCMA); National Golf Course Managers (NGCM); Association of Golf Course Managers (AGCM); American Golf Course Managers (AGCM); National Association of Golf Course Managers (NAGCM); or American Directors of Golf Course Maintenance (ADGCM)?

Maybe we will make a complete circle and be called "greenkeepers" once again, as we are still sometimes called by the golfing public and media today. And perhaps name our association the National Greenkeepers Association (NGA), which is a simple, less-cumbersome name with a simple acronym. Or how about International Greenkeepers Association (IGA)? Outside of North America, "greenkeeper" is the accepted title worldwide, though some other countries like the United Kingdom and Sweden are following America's lead by trying to upgrade their titles to course manager.

The debate by GCSAA and local chapters will be interesting - another exciting milestone in golf course superintendency in North America.
