NGF touts new tools, customer loyalty awards

By DEREK RICE

ORLANDO, Fla. — Seeking to help golf courses better understand both their current and potential customers, the National Golf Foundation (NGF) introduced its InfoNet service and handed out three Customer Loyalty and Satisfaction Program (CLASP) Awards at the PGA Merchandise Show held here.

The CLASP program is a method of evaluating facilities based solely on responses from their customers. By viewing the results, courses can tell what areas of their operations need improvement, which should, by extension, lead to more rounds played.

The NGF presented the new awards to facilities in three categories — premium daily-fee, a daily-fee and a municipal facility — based on consumer responses to NGF surveys. The winner in the premium daily-fee category was Silverstone Golf Club in Las Vegas, which is operated by ChampionsGate, Fla.-based Meadowbrook Golf. The daily-fee winner was Lago Vista Golf Club in Lago Vista, Texas. The municipal winner was Painted Dunes Desert Golf Course in El Paso, Texas. “As an organization, we really embrace the CLASP program and could not be happier with the award,” said Cindi Fentgold, public and media relations director for Meadowbrook Golf. “We are really proud of our properties and their efforts.”

More than 400 facilities participate in the CLASP program, which has generated more than 50,000 surveys in the system. The NGF’s InfoNet allows facilities to confidentially share and compare key financial and operations data with other local, regional and national operators. NGF members can access the compiled information free, while non-NGF members may receive a free monthly report for participating or unlimited access for $149 a year.

Taking the guesswork out of hiring

By HARRIS M. PLOTKIN

Putting forth the time and effort to hire the right person for a job costs time and money. However, not spending that initial time and effort can often cost a club much more money in employee theft and turnover costs, and in negligent hiring, sexual harassment and wrongful termination lawsuits. These lawsuits are on the rise because many clubs are not aware of what techniques are legal and available to use in the hiring process.

If you don’t select the right person to start with, no amount of training is ever going to make that person right for the job. You can’t train a frog to be a prince. Too many managers and superintendents make hiring decisions based solely on an interview, and that hiring decision is usually made in the first 3-4 minutes of the interview. The interview, while a necessary and informative aspect of the hiring process, should not be the sole basis for candidate selection. The key to improving your hiring process is to pay careful attention to the steps to take before the interview. Pre-interview screening will not only save you time and money, it can be the difference between just hiring a candidate and hiring the right candidate.

Gerald Graham, dean of the W. Frank Barton School of Business at Wichita State University, wrote that the three most important factors for success in management were training will not only save you time and money, it can be the difference between just hiring a candidate and hiring the right candidate. Keyonix finds success with Ratcliffe Golf

By DEREK RICE

GREENVILLE, S.C. — Keyonix LLC recently celebrated the six-month anniversary of its first multi-course installation. Ratcliffe Golf Services in Charlotte, N.C., implemented Keyonix’s Smart Key System of accountability for golf car use last summer. The technology is similar to that which has been used in the hotel industry for years. The Smart Key enables course owners and managers to regulate and account for all car use and revenue.

The Smart Key works with a golf car’s ignition system to allow the car to be used only by people who have paid to use it. The Smart Key also allows for a time limit, which prevents players from playing extra or unauthorized rounds. Del Ratcliffe, president of Ratcliffe Golf Services, said the cost of the Smart Key system pales in comparison with revenue lost on unauthorized rounds.

“Keyonix has provided us with a reasonably priced accountability system that gives unprecedented control over our golf car operations,” Ratcliffe said. “This is the first system that has seen that firmly places the control of the fleet in the hands of the course manager.”

Bobby LoVine, national sales manager for Keyonix, said the success of the Ratcliffe installation should lead to more multi-course installations in the future.

“We have always thought that our system was tailor-made for the multi-course operator,” LoVine said. “This system enables owners and operators to focus more on their business, rather than worrying about missing revenues.”
Hiring decisions

"Selection, selection, selection. Employee selection is so crucial that nothing else – not leadership, not team building, not training, not pay incentives, not total quality management – can overcome poor hiring decisions. The aim of selection (to find the best person for the job) may not have changed. But today's consequences of making a bad hire can be severe."

Key factors to help identify whether candidates will be successful at a job include: the ability or aptitude to do the work; attitude and motivation to utilize their talents to do the work; experience the job requires; education and training for the job; and most importantly, compatibility with the organization.

RESUMES AND EMPLOYMENT APPLICATIONS

The first thing many employers receive when a job is advertised is a resume or employment application. Resumes are time-consuming to filter through, but they can be effective first screens for candidates. Resumes should be compared against specific selection criteria to see if the candidate has the necessary education, training and experience. It is important to keep in mind, however, that 50 percent of resumes contain fabrications or exaggerations of pay, position and responsibilities.

TESTS

The most important step in developing a hiring process is to do the least expensive, most accurate step first. Most people think this is the interview, but very rarely do they take into account how much time and money is spent interviewing up to three people.

Results of a study done by Michigan State University's School of Business revealed that tests were rated four times more accurate than interviews. In designing your hiring process, you must look at the various tests that are available to you, and select those which will measure the qualities you want the applicant to have, so you can compare them to your criteria and make an accurate hiring decision.

Tests are legal and they have been for many years. There are some exceptions. For example, in Rhode Island you cannot use an honesty test as the sole reason for rejecting an applicant; there must be other considerations. In Massachusetts, you cannot use an honesty test at all, but in the remainder of the states you can.

REFERENCES AND BACKGROUND CHECKS

Many background checks can be conducted. However, the primary purpose of a background check is to reduce your potential liability for negligent hiring lawsuits. It is important to note that background checks will not tell you if an applicant is honest. Too often, companies have relied on credit checks to do this because of their insurance companies' wishes. All you can tell from a credit check is that somebody has been paying their bills, but you can't tell if they stole the money to do it.

Tests, background checks and reference checks must all be put into their proper contexts. They, along with the interview, are tools to give you information. While none of those tools alone will provide you with all of the information you need, collectively they provide you with a piece of the candidate selection puzzle that will help you make a more accurate and informed hiring decision.
