was his bright sportsmanship and helpfulness to his pro and amateur friends. In footsteps of this admirable father follows Tom McNamara, jr., recently elected VP of the Westchester Section of the Professional Golfer’s Salesmen’s Assn. Tom, jr., like his father, is employed by the Wilson Sporting Goods Co. He is a well-liked and successful salesman and enjoys the good will and respect of the New York Metropolitan district pro trade which he covers, and his competitors as well.

Tom, jr., is active in advancing the PGSA in its ambition of furthering interests of salesmen, pros and manufacturers. He was educated at Fordham. Tom is well qualified to maintain the high tradition of McNamara in American golf.

The Acushnet Process
Sales Co., New Bedford, Mass., on Jan. 15 made public its latest move to guarantee price maintenance to pro-shops in all parts of the country distributing Acushnet golf balls. The policy of this company is to sell its balls through pro-shops only. As a result of the good will and increased sales realized, Acushnet has found it advisable to strengthen and protect its policy in every possible way. Wherever Acushnet balls were reported for sale at unauthorized outlets, immediate steps have been taken to remove the balls from those points of sale. Further, whenever possible to trace this merchandise to its source, the supply has been immediately cut off.

Heretofore, Acushnet has never been able to support its efforts to protect the pro with the threat of a penalty. Now, Fair-Trade legislation recently enacted in 44 of the 48 states, makes possible court action against any retail outlet selling balls bearing the Acushnet name and at prices lower than those established by Acushnet in reciprocal agreement with one or more pros in that state.

Referring to this new set-up, the management says: "We know that the pro has been greatly helped by our efforts in the past. We are, therefore, glad to make this announcement as further evidence of our interest in the pro's financial weland one inch thick. Special sizes are made to order for outdoor or indoor use, in any style desired. The manufacturers will gladly supply further details upon request.

On Monday, December 23, the Acushnet Process Company, New Bedford, Mass., gave a party for all its 850 employees at the well-known Dan's Pavilion. After dinner, floor show entertainment was provided, followed by dancing.

In bonuses to the employees the company distributed a substantial sum. This is the second year in succession when good business has made it possible to share profits with all those who helped build them.

The high light of the evening was the presentation to Philip E. Young, president, Acushnet Process Company, of a radio direction-finder compass for his yacht, the Black Arrow. This compass was bought and presented by the employees as a whole. Young expressed his appreciation of the splendid co-operation given by every one during the past twelve months and emphasized the increasing need for continued team play.

McClain Brothers Company, of Canton, Ohio, is continuing to find a wide reception for its Power Hydro-Mixer outfit, which has now been on the market several years. For a number of years their hand operated Hydro-Mixer proved exceptionally popular everywhere for treating and fertilizing putting greens. However, the popularity of the hand outfit was so great that many of the McClain customers suggested the need of adding power to this unique piece of equipment.

The company announces that those who already have the hand operated Hydro-Mixer can now pur- chase the Power Unit and attach it to their present outfit in a few minutes. The power outfit is said to run a whole day on a few cents worth of gasoline. This new power outfit, McClain officials announce, will be on display in McClain booth No. 11 at the Detroit equipment show. Complete literature and prices may be had from the company at any time.

in the company's 96-year history. This record was established with the aid of three consecutive record-breaking months during the last quarter of 1940.

The electric eye has made its appearance in golf as a controlling feature of Master Eye Golf, a new practice device made by the Fairway Co., Inc., 47 Second St., San Francisco, Calif.

On a view of a hole projected at the end of the Master Eye device away from the tee, position of the ball as it would be on the fairway is shown. This ingenious feature shows whether the ball hit has been hooked, sliced or straight, and how far it was hit. There also is a yardage indicator dial, and a fairway replica scoring diagram on the wall alongside the player, for showing results of the shot.

The device is operated on a coin box basis. After the coin is dropped a time control begins operating. The electric eye and recording mechanism is in operation for the period covered by the coin payment.

Master Eye is said to be bringing excellent returns at installations now made on the Pacific Coast.

"Red" O'Dea, former Midwest golf pro, has been appointed representative for U. S. golf balls in the Chicago District. Along with Keith Muller, well-known U. S. representative, he will cover some of the metropolitan area of Chicago and adjacent territory.

In addition to his duties as a pro in the summer months, O'Dea has traveled as representative for a general line of sporting goods. As a result of this combined activity, he is well equipped to sell the complete line of U. S. balls. "Red" replaces Verne Nash who resigned recently to go into another line of work.

Masters Planter Co., 4025 W. Lake St., Chicago, III., has a product, Handi-Cart, which should find countless uses around a golf course. The new Handi-Cart may well prove to be the successor to the wheelbarrow. There is no shoveling or stooping to load up the Handi-Cart. The operator just tips it down and rakes grass-cuttings, leaves, trash, earth, sand, etc., right into the cart—then tips it back and he has a full load. Similarly, to load heavy stones, bricks, cement blocks, etc., all he has to do is tip the front down, with no lifting at all.

Handi-Cart is made with sturdy supported sheet metal body; solid steel axle; 10 inch disc wheels; rubber tires. It is made in two sizes, of two and three cubic feet capacity, and is most inexpensively priced. Full details may be obtained by writing direct to the company.
