Father's Day this year will be Sunday, June 15. Many clubs have scheduled Father-Son and Father-Daughter events for Sunday afternoon. Ma is on her own unless she wants to join the play as an added starter.

Alert pro merchants plan to make bids for Father's Day gift business.

Ed sold a big volume of equipment by this fine piece of business judgment. After all, there is a better place to display golf merchandise than at a big championship tournament.

A few years ago, I was impressed by a tee at the Bellevue Biltmore CC at Bellair, Florida. This spot was the teaching tee and was very private. The tee was surrounded by a neat hedge and there was a sign stating that this was a private teaching tee. In other words, George Low and Billy Burke could give extra lessons in private and no doubt accomplished better results.

Pupils Are Self-Conscious

How often pupils have been practicing shots and suffered fits of self-consciousness when someone came over and started talking to you about the price of cheese in Norway or the putt that Guldahl missed at North Shore, or maybe his Aunt Emma who played hockey. There are times in golf when one wants to be alone. When taking a lesson, most players would rather be out of line of the curious eyes of others.

It is not an accident that theaters, circuses and road houses, to say nothing of hundreds of other business spots, spend time and money on painting and redecorating every year. Bars and cocktail lounges are very conscientious about this detail. Pleasant surroundings mean pleased customers, and happy customers mean more dimes and dollars in the till when closing time arrives.

In most golf shops the dust problem is constant. The club cleaning operations can cause a steady flow of fine dust that must be fought at every step to keep it from getting knee deep in the corners and too deep on the show cases and merchandise display.

Ned Jamieson, successful young pro at Beverly in Chicago, says that all shops should be arranged so that the cleaning room could be closed away from the other parts of the shop. This is a fine idea and seems to be standard practice at many clubs.

During June, 1939, while visiting in Richmond, Va., my attention was drawn to the cleaning room at Bobby Cruickshank's big Country Club of Va. This room was closed off and had a powerful dust blower attached to the motor to take out excess dust. The crew in this cleaning room really get work done without a lost motion and of course there is not much dust in the Cruicky shop.

A shop in one of the finest clubs in this country is so dark you can hardly read the ball names on the boxes. This pro spot could be made very attractive with the purchase of some bigger bulbs or by using units of the fluorescent lighting that has come into vogue recently. Lighting is usually the easiest defect to remedy in the golf shop.

It might be easier in golf if the club officials insisted that the professional do certain things in his shop such as: keep it clean and neat, keep it nicely painted and well lighted, and keep the display and the general appearance of the shop up to a high standard. However, too often the club officials and members just go off and crab about it, never say a word to the pro, and do their buying somewhere else.

If a golf professional is to be rated as a professional man of high standing, he must assume the responsibilities of a professional manner and do his work in pleasant surroundings both in the shop and on the lesson tee.

BALTIMORE (Md.) school system's Department of Health and Physical Education has arranged for a series of free demonstrations at Baltimore high schools. The Department in its bulletin states that it fosters golf because "among the games which can be played and enjoyed by all age groups, golf stands preeminent."

Each pro gives 3 lectures and demonstrations either in the school auditorium or in an adjacent playfield.

Pros who have contributed their services to promotion of golf in these Baltimore high school demonstrations are Ralph Beach, John Bass, Charles Betschler, Wm. Schreiber, John Flattery, Andy Gibson, and Frank Invernizzi.
