Crawford, MacGregor, Canby Co., Dayton, Ohio, has moved its New York office from the former location at 3 Park Place to the ninth floor of 251 Fourth Ave. Tom Robbins, MacGregor's New York manager, says the move is not one of curtailment but rather of expansion, since the new quarters are considerably larger than those formerly occupied.

Even with gas rationing and other restrictions due to the war, MacGregor plans to keep every one of its branches open and has arranged to maintain large stocks of golf equipment and sportswear at various branches in order to save shipping department labor and transportation, and to eliminate numerous local delivery problems, all of which will tend to better serve their pro customers.

If you want to know what's happening to some of the rubber you can't have, a new film released by United States Rubber Co. will give you many of the answers. It's a fast-moving film that takes you from plant to plant of the company's Footwear Division, shows you war products in volume production, then shows each product in actual use.

For example, you'll see pictures of barrage balloons being made, then see them floating in the air guarding essential war industries. You'll see in the making those inflatable boats that rescue flyers forced down at sea, then watch those boats in actual use.

Life-saving suits that help rescue men of the Merchant Marine when boats are torpedoed, pontoons for quick bridge-building, self-sealing gasoline tanks, large storage tanks, aviation wading suits, protective footwear and protective clothing for our armed forces are just a few of the things you'll see in production and in action.

"Rubber Goes To War" is a 16 mm film in black and white with sound track. Its two reels have a running time of 21 minutes. It is available without charge by writing to Footwear Division, United States Rubber Co., 1230 6th Ave., N. Y. C.

While priority lists are diminishing pro shop inventories, A. G. Spalding & Bros. is doing its best to see that professionals have golf ball stocks on hand this spring. In spite of material shortages, the company still manages to produce war-time golf balls from old ones collected from whatever sources will yield them.

As fast as the old balls arrive at the... factory, a special reclaiming process goes to work to recover the usable rubber. The illustration shows a workman removing covers after the old balls have been sorted into types. To make sure that the remade balls measure up to the high standards set, a compression machine checks hardness before they are shipped.

Although finished golf balls are leaving the factory in reassuring volume, Spalding urges pros to continue soliciting old ones from members' lockers, attics, and garages to guard against any possibility of empty shelves later.

Rogers Diesel and Aircraft Corp. of New York City, N. Y., has acquired through its Edwards Company division the Ideal Power Lawn Mower Co. Commenting on this new addition, R. B. Rogers, president of Rogers, said: "The Ideal Power Lawn Mower Co. has subcontracted for us for some time. In our effort to supply a continuous flow of diesel power equipment to the armed forces, we found it advisable to make Ideal a part of our organization. This move will insure uninterrupted production of the parts which Ideal has been supplying us."

At present the plant is operating close to 100 per cent on subcontracts for war work, and will continue to devote its facilities to war production for the duration.

Kauffman’s, at 139 E. 24th St., New York City, is all set for a market created by the rubber conservation program. About a year ago, the company began buying up all types of horse-drawn vehicles—carriages, buckboards, pony carts, broughams and station wagons, mostly from famous New York area estates. Such famous makes as Brewster, Studebaker, Healey and McMurray were acquired.

Now, Kaufman’s is finding a ready market for these vehicles among people who need a horse-drawn vehicle for transportation. Among these buyers, country clubs have been well represented, and if there is no easing of regulations as the season advances relative to motor-driven vehicles, nearly all clubs without public transportation facilities at their very doors are expected to adopt the horse-drawn vehicle plan to get members to the course.

Chicago USO Plan

the USO is acting solely as agent for the club hosts and that the rules of the clubs regarding guests must be strictly observed.

Each man getting a pass at the USO office receives a sheet on which the CDGA-Chicago USO golf plan is explained and on which instructions are given to the players.

The sheet reads.

Explanation

Extending golf privileges on private courses must be handled with discretion. Those who are serious golfers and know the etiquette of the game should have the privilege of playing. In civilian life, the beginner, if he has not been able to take private lessons, usually learns on public fee courses or uses driving ranges. Private clubs should not be expected to take the place of this procedure for service men. Those who issue passes, therefore, should follow the policy implied by the above statements.

Instructions

1—Participating golf clubs will be listed on weekly assignment sheets at the Central USO Club at 131 S. Wabash, Franklin 2976. These sheets will carry spaces for the number of passes to be issued on each golf club on each day.
2—These passes will be issued in duplicate and will be serially numbered.
3—Players will be given the originals for admission to the golf clubs. The duplicates are to be retained and mailed each Monday to the Golf Chairman, USO Club, 131 S. Wabash, Chicago. The originals will be collected by the golf club managers and mailed also each Monday to the USO Golf Chair-
