For years it has been a growing conviction with me that the average American businessman has not been sufficiently informed of the value of physical fitness, and this fact constitutes a decided weakness in our national morale. In time of peace this weakness is submerged, but now that we are at war, it appears a real menace to our national safety. The older business executives upon whom we depend for national leadership are especially neglectful of their health. It therefore becomes the duty of all of us who help carry the responsibility for the physical education of our youth and business men to do all within our power to cultivate a real understanding and appreciation of good health and physical well being. There is nothing which so completely controls our thinking personality and productive ability as physical fitness. It's not enough for you and me to know that golf is the answer to a more healthful and enjoyable life; it's our patriotic duty to sell its value enthusiastically to those who need it most. Through depression and prosperity, in war and in peace, golf faithfully serves the health and morale of America.—George Aulbach in "Golf Marches On."
