The mimeographed postcard Bill enclosed has spaces in which the member checks items in which he is interested. This card is shown above.

You will note that Bill does not have on his card the complete line carried in his shop. The objective of the mailing is to get the prospects indicating interest and after that expression Bill can show them exactly what he thinks will fit their requirements.

Also notice how the "quota" element is discreetly mentioned in the second paragraph of the letter. This probably will mean that members will come in wanting to buy balls for the season to make sure. So what? Bill, like the rest of the fellows, probably will sell them as many as they want with reasonable limits and hope for relaxing of the quotas by summer. The branch of the Chicago river which runs through his course also should help to get his ball volume back onto the basis of the "good old days."

There's still a debate between experienced and successful pro businessmen as to whether it is better to give the members "the works" all in one mailing or give them a series of short letters or announcements on new equipment, club cleaning, lessons and other items of sales and service. One thing is certain and that is that the businessman does not read long letters.

Whether to mail at home or office addresses is another point on which experience of pros differ.

Last spring we noticed that in several shops where able clubmakers were available a bid was made for remaking grips to fit the member's hands. Grip leather was hard to get, of course, so often the old leather was used and the grip built up. Good prices were received for this work and the members talked about it as something they could get that helped their games.

In the spring preparations, one of the highly important factors is plain pricing of the merchandise in the shop. Then, in the letters or circulars, try to get the members to come out and look over the stock.
