Billy Bell, pres., American Society of Golf Course Architects, says A. Vernon Macon did “very wonderful” job of revamping Seattle GC course for National Amateur...Mac spotted a few sandtraps on the course that has but few artificial hazards and toughened the 6,632 yd. course for long hitters without making the alterations painful in club member play... He rebuilt several greens with the modern type of construction easing the maintenance problem and expense as well as making the holes better tests... May leaves a lot of space for cup locations on his interesting greens... Bob Finlay, supt. at the course about 30 years, had it in fine playable condition... Various strains of bent are on greens but each green is to one strain... That makes a maintenance problem for Bob and to amateurs who are accustomed to uniform and lightning greens the Seattle greens were an alibi... But no complaints about trueness of the greens.

When are golfers who think they are qualified to be champions going to learn that each course is a problem to be solved by the genuine artist?... The course is the same for the entire field... The winner likes it... Rough at Seattle was mild yet some of the younger players thought it was tough because they didn’t know how to play out of it... With so many courses getting softened by low mowing of rough there should be practice spots of real rough so players who want to be able to play testing courses will get a chance to practice rough shots required in first class competition.

Not one in 20 contestants in the National Amateur field had much skill or confidence in making those exacting chips from the fringes of the green... Very few tournament pros know this shot either... So, naturally, when there’s a shot the sharpshooters can’t play they want it ruled out of the game as “unfair.”... It is an excellent test of skill, especially on a course like Seattle GC with small greens... Maybe somebody will invent a club that will make delicate shots as easy as the wedge has made trap shots around greens.

One hole at Seattle GC that should be on a lot of lists of “the 18 best holes” is the 468 yd. 16th, which is par 5 on the club scorecard and par 4 on the National Amateur card... Tee is on top of a long slope... Lake at the bottom of the slope catches a drive that is too far to the left... There’s a level landing area on the right... Go too much to the right and you’re in the forest primeval... Long shot over the water to a small elevated green, and another forest if the approach heads toward the left... There’s a trap about 20 yards short of the green and guarding its right side, which requires accurate placement of the tee shot to open the green to a perfectly executed second shot on a long par 4.

Bill Zonker, Seattle GC pro, started with the club as a caddy when he was 8 years old... He was supposed to be 12 but his brother and a cousin got him in... Bill now points to a ledge outside his pro shop that he used to stand on tip-toe to be able to look through a shop window... We didn’t think it possible for smoothness and speed of clubhouse service at 1951 Amateur at Saucon Valley to be equalled, but Mgr. Al Flett and his staff at Seattle GC did it... Al and his team kept that clubhouse as neat as a living room... Tournament chmn. Chuck Adams and his comrades did a thorough job of organizing a championship operation so players were very well cared for and spectators were treated like welcome guests... Press arrangements fine, too.

Considerable interest in northwest in USGA Green Section’s establishment of Pacific Coast station with Charles Wilson in charge... Plenty of problems in course maintenance in the northwestern states and Green Section’s convenient availability for help is hailed as big step forward in improving course conditions and keeping costs in line... USGA officials at Seattle said Wilson to make extensive tour of the area in getting close-up on problems to be discussed with Fred Grau, USGA Green Section director, and other authorities in organizing most helpful research and aid program.

US amateur team narrowly edged out Canadians amateurs in the first US-Canadian-Mexican amateur team matches for the Americas trophy donated by Jerry Bowes... US 12, Canadian 10, Mexican 5... Mexicans made a fine showing.
