1957-58, Southern supt.s had to contend with the "big freeze" and courses were slow coming into shape. This year, abonormally dry weather has done considerable damage to turf.

In the Southwest, according to Goldthwaite's Texas Toro Co., budgets have inched up in the last two years and, while they probably are adequate, increased costs of labor and materials require that the supt. watch his appropriation quite closely. Labor, too, is slightly more efficient and plentiful, probably because wage rates are up a little over what they were two years ago and employees are getting better training. Weather conditions, says the Goldthwaite people, have been conducive to better courses than have been seen in the Southwest for some time. Rainfall has been adequate and usually timely and in mid-August most courses in that section were in peak condition, considering the season.

Public Course Clubhouse
Mohawk clubhouse since it has been in operation. That is the usual thing in new clubhouses. At Mohawk the lockerrooms and shops are too warm in the summer and too cold in the winter. The demand for air-conditioning in private and public clubhouses in the South and Southwest is giving builders new problems.

The kitchen area at Mohawk isn't adequate. Unexpected demand on cooking and freezer capacity, dishwashing machinery and bottle storage suddenly was revealed when the clubhouse was put into operation. Steak dinners are popular with Tulsa golfing organizations but the kitchen facilities are too limited for handling fairly large affairs where hungry golfers demand plenty of red meat.

However, the clubhouse shortcomings that have become evident are, to a large extent, the result of the contrast with general attractiveness of the surroundings and and can be corrected by addition of more kitchen and storage space and better heating and air conditioning. Otherwise, the new Mohawk clubhouse is declared by the Tulsa golfers, who use the facilities, and by the clubhouse operating staff, to be pretty nearly perfect for their needs.
