Turfgrass interests united

The idea of a unified voice for turf has been discussed for many years. Until there was recognition for this newest agricultural entity, there was no point nor any chance of developing a voice. In the first place, no one would listen. In the second place, the dedicated workers in turfgrass were too few and too far apart (geographically and mentally) to develop unanimity.

Perhaps no one ever will be able to pinpoint the precise time in turfgrass history when the idea of a turfgrass council was born. Pennsylvania's Turf Advisory Committee, long headed by the late Joe Valentine, began about 1930 and, soon after 1950, gradually integrated into The Pennsylvania Turfgrass Council. Its first meeting was held in April 1955. Year by year its position has strengthened and it has served as a model for other coun-
