Shortage Predicted in 1975 For Weed Control Materials

Due to shortages of materials needed for manufacture of herbicides, mainly petroleum and gas, experts predict 1975 will be another year of herbicide shortages. Prices are also expected to be 10 to 30 percent higher in 1975 than in 1974.

There will be very few new products in 1975, and superintendents are advised to determine what materials and what amounts he needs, and get his order in as soon as possible. "Except delivery as soon as possible," one agronomist told GOLFDOM, "this will protect a superintendent from shortages and any subsequent increases in price."

If a superintendent cannot find the herbicide he needs, there are substitutions that can be made, but Edward Stroube, extension agronomist at Ohio State University, urges the superintendent to be sure these substitutes will do similar jobs. Also, if only a limited amount of material is available, he said, do not reduce the rate so you can use the material on more acres. Use the herbicide at a rate required for good weed control on the most seriously infested areas and depend on cultural practices on the remaining area.

Superintendent Standard Set For Pesticide Application

The Environmental Protection Agency has announced rules and regulations governing the certification of applicators, including superintendents, who apply restricted-use pesticides.

It is important pesticide users who apply these pesticides become familiar with the certification requirements and the proper safe use of pesticides, according to David R. Miskell, associated state leader, agricultural industry, Ohio State University. He said that after Oct. 21, 1976, most pesticides classified for restricted use may be applied
