Custom Crest Clubs joins Power Track

Oscar Jones, founder of Oscar Jones Custom Crest Golf Clubs, and Ron Pawlacyk and John Tate, owners of Power Track Golf Company, have joined ranks and pooled their talents to produce golf equipment.

Jones started his golf career with Wilson Sporting Goods in 1951, then left in 1963 to head the Arnold Palmer Pro Golf Company in eleven western states. While with the Palmer company, Jones helped pioneer the use of investment cast process in the manufacture of irons and putters, and met Pawlacyk and Tate who worked with him there. In 1972 he formed his own company which produced wedges that could have a country club crest or logo included. He later added a complete set of woods, irons, wedges and putters to his line of custom products.

Fansteel changes, but not golf-wise

Fansteel Inc., a Chicago based minerals and manufacturing company that recently started producing top-price golf club heads, shafts, and tennis rackets, is now under the control of the H. K. Porter Co. Edward P. Evans, 34, who succeeded his father, Thomas Mellon Evans, as Porter’s chairman last September, acquired 85 percent control of Fansteel in a recent stock market move.

Since 1973, Fansteel has been little more than profitable and in the preceding 10 years it paid no dividends. Its poor showing is attributed to the financing of an acquisition program. Now it will be an 85-percent-owned subsidiary of Porter with five of its nine-member board nominated by Evans.

As far as GOLF BUSINESS could ascertain, Fansteel’s continuing president and chief executive officer, David D. Peterson, has no immediate plans to change the golf equipment manufacturing division, and Evans has no great management shifts in mind. Said Evans: “I hope management will stay. I think they will.”

New Fansteel owner Edward P. Evans plans no major changes for the golf shaft and investment casting firm.

Simmons pays debts through new stocks

A slump in the golf industry has been weathered by a manufacturer and the company is on its way back up.

Simmons International Corp., golf equipment manufacturer, reports it has reorganized under a Chapter XI proceeding in a record 22 days. The company’s plan to issue stock to its pre-November 20, 1974 creditors was filed in U.S. District Court on May 6, 1976 and confirmed on May 28. Filing of a Chapter XI proceeding was necessary in order to issue stock without registration with the Securities Exchange Commission. In accordance with the plan, Wells-Fargo Bank has agreed to accept $1.25 million of preferred stock as full settlement for its loan of that amount to the company.

The company “will build up slowly . . . with control,” Ed Valley, vice president of operations, told GOLF BUSINESS. Simmons has been operating on a current basis since November 1974.

“Valley said his company “manages to meet the needs of the industry,” and commented, “business is a little on the slow side.” He added the company’s comeback “will not be instantaneous.”

Survival of the company was attributed by George A. FitzPatrick, president, to high quality in products and present personnel, through this period of difficulty in the golf industry. Valley described present market conditions as bad and said “in my 30 years . . . I have never seen anything like it.”

New firm gives away ‘free’ ballwashers

Getting something for nothing is not an everyday occurrence in the golf market. For superintendents around the nation there is a new aspect to accessories they can cash into without any investment at all.

There is a catch, though, and it’s advertising. A firm called Teemaster International has come up with the idea of positioning ball washer units with advertising on them all over the country free to clubs interested in a bargain.

“We are shooting for daily fee and resort facilities,” Teemaster General Manager Brendan Baldwin told GOLF BUSINESS from his office in Santa Monica, Calif. Teemaster has designed the ball washer units, which are manufactured in Australia, as a complete unit including a hole in formation plate and a convenient four-sided trash basket, which the advertising plates are attached to.

In July, Baldwin’s company had established plans with nearly 200 courses over the country through a direct mail piece. Projections are for 400 to 500 clubs by next spring. That is still a long way from the nearly 7,000 courses that
