ASSOCIATIONS

Palmer keynotes GCSAA celebration

All of the original members of the Golf Course Superintendents Association of America have passed away, but if any of them were still alive, they would have been impressed with the 50th birthday party the superintendents gave themselves last month in Toledo, Ohio.

Everything worked well for the association, including the weather at Sylvania Country Club. Visitors to the anniversary site had to be impressed with the collection of antique maintenance equipment and an assortment of golf course memorabilia that brought home the great strides the turf maintenance business has made since the 1920's.

It was truly an enjoyable day and night, but guest speaker Arnold Palmer broke the night's euphoria when he told the assembled superintendents and guests that their industry could be heading for trouble and they had to realize it.

"Are you going to let tennis take us over?" Palmer asked. Admitting with pride that he was the son of a golf course superintendent, the playing great emphasized the hard work the industry has ahead of it.

Although Palmer admitted his speaking style was pretty much ad lib, his audience accepted the thought and responded. Palmer pointed to the fact that golf might be losing its hold on the American public. He gave the example of Ray Floyd's win in the World Open in North Carolina and how it had not even been televised — but a tennis tournament was.

"Start thinking about greenbelt legislation, real estate taxes, and better wages," Palmer told his listeners. "These things all affect our business." The man from Latrobe (Pa.) Country Club used his influence on his younger brother, Jerry, who left another job to take over at Latrobe as course superintendent, as their late father was. Jerry also has gone back to turfgrass school at Pennsylvania State University, and is now a year away from getting his degree.

Even though the spotlight was directed at the celebrity speaker, 11 men who had literally made turfgrass their lives stole the show as recipients of the GCSAA's Outstanding Service awards.

As each attempted to cope with the pressure of accepting such a coveted piece of hardware, there were some longer-than-usual speeches of acceptance and some very short ones. All in all, for these superintendents, it was as one of them said, "A moment I will remember always."

The list was distinguished and read like a Who's Who of the Wolfram, Sr., Maple Lane Golf Club, Sterling Heights, Mich.; and Jay D. Woodward, Desert Forest Golf Course, Carefree, Ariz.

Probably the busiest man at the gathering of the GCSAA clan was current national President Richard Malpass. The Oregon superintendent performed the master of ceremonies role well, from helping in the unveiling of a commemorative plaque, set in rock at Sylvania to mark the spot of the association's birth, to cutting a heavily frosted anniversary cake.

President Gerald Ford heralded the GCSAA effort in a letter from the White House, and dignitaries from the rest of the golf business gathered to honor the GCSAA. The Club Managers Association of America sent Executive Director Horace Duncan and President Harry Gray. The National Club Association was represented by Executive Director Jerry Hurley.

The National Golf Foundation's executive director, Don Rossi, was also present, along with its president, Paul MacDonald.

The banquet was a well-run show. The past officers and presidents were led into the hall by a bagpiper, who if nothing else added a sort of loud, historic presence to the proceedings.

A 36-hole golf tournament, held the next two days at Sylvania and nearby Glengary Country Club, was won by William Knox, superintendent at Scioto Country Club in Columbus, Ohio. Superintendent/golf professional flight winner Joseph Felus, Whitemarsh Valley Country Club, Conshohocken, Pa., was presented the GOLF BUSINESS trophy by the magazine's publisher, Hugh Chronister.

CLUBS & COURSES

West L.A. gets new private course

MountainGate Country Club, the first private 18-hole golf course built in the West Los Angeles area in a quarter century, opened earlier this year. Almost half of the limited number of memberships were taken at that time.

The championship par-71 course sits in the Brentwood hills between Westwood and the San Fernando Valley. Designed by Ted Robinson, it was seeded in August 1973 and allowed to mature some 27 months before its first informal opening.

"MountainGate is a club for the true golf enthusiast," said Club Manager Don Howell. Although the club has a cocktail lounge, snack bar, and dining area as well as a pro shop, the emphasis is on golf rather than social events. One comforting feature for those playing at MountainGate is that the temperature is often as much as 10 degrees cooler on the course than in the valley and other parts of the L.A. basin — thanks to the prevailing breeze from the ocean.

MountainGate is a development of Barclay Hollander Corp. and is operated by California Golf.

Tough public course opens in So. Cal.

"This is not a typical public course. This is a championship course."

The man talking was superintendent John Miller. He was describing his course, the Mint Valley Municipal Golf Course, which opened in Southern California August 15. Designed by golf course architect Ron Fream, also of California, Mint Valley has four ponds and makes liberal use of traps. The par-71 course plays 5,600 yards from the championship tees, 6,100 from the regular men's markers, and 5,300 from the women's.

Scheduled to open later at Mint Valley is a par 27 pitch-and-putt course.

Golden Hills offers four-season climate with occasional snow in winter and balmy, cool summers. Attractions for golfers — besides the clean mountain air — are swimming, tennis, hiking, fishing, elegant dining facilities, and a lounge with live entertainment on weekends. The club invites tournaments and group outings.

BEVERAGE SERVICE

Taylor switches to metric magnums

The Taylor Wine Co. has become one of the first to convert an existing wine package from the American standard to the international metric system of measurement, by switching from half-gallon bottles to metric magnums (1.5 liters) for its dinner and dessert wines.

"The change called for far more than a simple switch of containers," said Lloyd G. Magee, Taylor vice president and director of marketing, in commenting on the amount of paperwork involved in getting the new size approved by state agencies having jurisdiction over wine sales. The company began work on the change late in 1974 and began shipping about a year ago. The conversion is now 95 percent complete, so Taylor is considerably ahead of the January 1, 1979 deadline for the wine industry's conversion to metric as promulgated by the government.

The company plans a gradual conversion of its other wine sizes over the next two years. The present quart will become a liter, the fifth will become the 750-milliliter size, the "tenth" will have 375 milliliters, the "split" will be 187 milliliters, and the "miniature" size will contain 100 milliliters.

Golden Hills Club goes public

California Golf Inc. has purchased Golden Hills Country Club, an 18-hole course located in the Tehachapi Mountains of California, and opened it to the general public. California Golf is a business management firm operating many recreational facilities throughout the state — including Yorba Linda Country Club, Camarillo Springs Golf Course, Lake Arrowhead Country Club, MountainGate Country Club, Westchester Golf Course, Santa Fe Springs Golf Course, and Berkeley's Tilden
