Scanning the Web

Communication is the key for creating a productive work environment. After all, if the employees aren’t speaking to each other, how are they going to accomplish your course’s goals? Here are a few sites that will give you tips on how to get everyone at your course working together. (All sites start with http:// unless otherwise noted):

*www.dartnellcorp.com — This is the Web site of Dartnell Corp, a consultancy group specializing in building communications skills. The site’s clean look makes it simple to navigate, and it contains a specific area designated for team-building tools. You can order newsletters, audio tapes, videos and books that will give you communication tips in easily digestible pieces.

*www.inspiredpro.com — Start with the theory that being personally fulfilled will help everyone at your course communicate better together. Add a little popular psychology, and you have the essential components of this Web site. Its electronic magazine has sections designed to help you better understand your own goals as well as the goals of those around you. All that’s missing from this new-age site is the sitar music.

*www.clement.com — Like something out of a Dilbert cartoon, this site provides managers a sure-fire way to raise morale and build teamwork for a horribly overworked staff: posters. There are posters located on the site you can try for free, but for the REALLY inspirational posters, The Employee Development Co. requires that you give them money.

Scanning the Web is compiled by noted misanthrope Frank H. Andorka Jr., Golfdom’s associate editor, who works hard to get along with absolutely no one. You can reach him at fandorka@advanstar.com with future column suggestions or sites you think he should visit, but don’t expect him to use any of your ideas.

Calling it Quits

Former golfers over 40 give these reasons for loosening their grip on the old putter. Oddly enough, they don’t admit to throwing in the towel simply because their swings suck.
