We've Got Mail

LETTERS FROM THE FIELD

Is Perception Reality?

We're employed in an industry that serves millions of people annually. It can be a very rewarding career — when everything goes right and all is well in the universe. Unfortunately, this cosmic alignment rarely happens. The problem is that for many of us this is expected — everything going right and perfect conditions are expected daily. Why does this happen? Why are we subject to such scrutiny?

Recently, I attended the 38th annual Wisconsin Golf Turf Symposium, and some of the top turfgrass experts in the country were featured speakers: Joe Vargas and Ron Calhoun from Michigan State University; Frank Rossi from Cornell University; Craig Currier from Bethpage State Park; Bruce Clarke from Rutgers University; Mike Morris from Crystal Downs Country Club; and Michael McNulty from the Philadelphia Country Club.

Currier, director of golf course maintenance at Bethpage, said something that most of us know, but very few of our customers understand: "It took six years to prepare for one week of golf." Yes, I know this was one the Major's, definitely is not the same speed everywhere. Why do we make lemonade? This is a challenge with which we are all faced with, especially now with our slower economy and golf rounds spiraling. Morris, the certified superintendent from Crystal Downs Country Club in Franklin, Mich., had some interesting comments. He took the offensive approach. He talked to members and asked them what target green speeds they would accept. Surprisingly, when he sped them up for a club event and tried to maintain the same speed afterward, the members asked him to get them back to normal.

I believe we are our own worst enemies at times. One of our greatest detriments is our lack of communication. I know that we preach to the choir in triumphant choruses, but are loath to carry the message to our employers. How well do we know that the squeakiest wheel gets the grease? Well, why not intelligently gather some data as Morris did and start squeezing?

Our livelihood demands the best of our abilities. Most of us strive well beyond the expectations of our clientele, but at what cost? Maybe we could all save a few gray hairs and save our employers some money if we took the initiative to assess our customers' expectations. Maybe that is the reality of our careers and our lives.

Tony Rzadzki
Irrigation Technician/PGA Construction Specialist
Whistling Straits Golf Course Sheboygan Falls, Wis.

So what can we do? When handed a handful of lemons, how do we make lemonade? This is a challenge with which we are all faced with, especially now with our slower economy and golf rounds spiraling. Morris, the certified superintendent from Crystal Downs Country Club in Franklin, Mich., had some interesting comments. He took the offensive approach. He talked to members and asked them what target green speeds they would accept. Surprisingly, when he sped them up for a club event and tried to maintain the same speed afterward, the members asked him to get them back to normal.

We want to hear from you. You can e-mail your letters to Frank Andorka at fandorka@advanstar.com, fax to 440-891-2575 or send them via snail-mail to: 7500 Old Oak Blvd., Cleveland, OH 44130. Make sure to include your name and phone number for verification.

American Society of Golf Course Architects 111 E. Wacker, 18TH FLOOR, CHICAGO 60601; 312-272-7090; WWW.ASGCA.ORG

Golf Course Superintendents Association of America 1421 RESEARCH PARK DR., LAWRENCE, KS 66049-3559; 800-472-7878; WWW.GCSAA.ORG

Golf Course Builders Association of America 727 14TH STREET, LINCOLN, NE 68502; 402-476-4444; WWW.GCBAA.ORG

National Golf Course Owners Association 201 SEVEN FARMS DRIVE, SECOND FLOOR, CHARLESTON, SC 29492; 843-881-9556; WWW.NGCOA.ORG

Responsible Industry for a Sound Environment 1156 15TH ST, NW, SUITE 400, WASHINGTON, DC; 202-672-3860; WWW.PESTFACTS.ORG