MONSANTO EXPLAINS RUSH SALES DEBUT OF KRILUM

Krilium soil conditioner, which golf course superintendents were told would not be commercially available until 1953, was introduced in newspaper ads May 11 by Monsanto Chemical Co., St. Louis, Mo. A Monsanto publicity handout for release May 11 gave the company's statement concerning the change in sales policy which puzzled superintendents and left them unprepared to answer inquiries of their members.

With a St. Louis dateline the statement read, in part:
"Charles Allen Thomas, president of Monsanto, said that sales of the conditioner in a home gardening formulation will begin before the agricultural and erosion control formulations of Krilium become available.

"The home garden market was selected as the first outlet for Krilium because methods of application are comparatively simple and quantities of the product involved are relatively small," Thomas said.

NEW METHOD FOR RECONDITIONING CUT OR DAMAGED BALLS

James Mulherin, Sales Mgr., Globe Products Co., 705 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo., announces a new method of reconditioning cut and badly bruised golf balls with an improved, simplified aluminum and steel hand press. The press is heated over an ordinary gas flame. The heat of the mold melts down and revulcanizes the whole cover to form all new surface markings. Mulherin, who has had over 25 years experience in rebuilding golf balls, claims that anyone can use this device without previous experience and reclaim 90 per cent of all cut balls where none of the original balata is missing. Further details may be obtained from the manufacturer.

The ability of Koroseal Tile Floor to "take it" is demonstrated in the locker-room of the Broadmoor GC, Colorado Springs. The 3 inch oak threshold of the locker-room has been worn down and replaced three times since the Koroseal floor was installed two years ago. The new all-vinyl plastic flooring is made by the Sloane-Blabon Corp., 295 Fifth Ave., New York City.
