

Penn State Course Popular

THE three-weeks' course at Penn State proved very popular this year and much good seemed to come from it. At the close of the course a three-day conference was held at which more than sixty clubs were represented.

Practically all the problems connected with the culture of fine turf and the control of turf diseases were covered in the discussions. These were handled mostly by the faculty of the Penn State School of Agriculture. Following is the registration for the Conference:
