I found it a little strange, but last month I had absolutely no feed-back from our 200 plus members about anything in the Newsletter. No one offered a name for the Newsletter, and no one had any new projects or solved problems that others could benefit from. I did have two people at the Fort Ord meeting ask about my tree injection experiments.

PLEASE CONTRIBUTE SOMETHING! If you don't know me or can't get in touch, call Myrtle Wagoner (209 523-7141) because she is the real backbone of this publication and puts it into print for everyone to read.

For those of you who couldn't attend the Fort Ord meeting, it was announced that the Golf Course Superintendents Association of Northern California was asked to host or help with the 1977 GCSAA golf tournament preceding the conference in Portland, Oregon. The tournament will be held on a Thursday and Friday, February 3 and 4, 1977. Course sites selected are Spyglass and Monterey Peninsula Dunes Course for the men, and Rancho Canada for the ladies. An added incentive is no green fees. Our hat goes off to some of the people that made these sites possible, Bob Hanna, Frank Silva, John Zollar and Larry Lloyd.

YOUR HOST SUPERINTENDENT - The last time we visited Lou Pohlson he was recovering from a heart attack. Lou has been at Alta Sierra for 10 years. The course has changed from a private to semi-private. His son Douglas is his assistant.

Lou says "Come play the 18-hole course tucked away in the hills". You will find it interesting and challenging.

RIDING ALONG WITH 97 - by Frank J. DeCarli, Pen-Gro Sales Company

At Santa Rosa Country Club, Superintendent Harold Bratton, reports that his course is in real fine shape, but that his out-houses keep getting abused. Kids have burned down his second one in the last year. "Harold, you better start making them out of cement block."

At Torrey Pines Golf Course in San Diego, you can play 18 holes of golf with added hazards that aren't in the book of golf, i.e., men flying kites, winging their way over the golf course fairways talking to the golfers. When the game of golf gets dull for the kite pilot, he swoops down to the nude beach nearby and talks to the bathers - an added attraction at no cost.

At Oceanside 4 years ago, two farmers decided to donate 200 acres of farmland to the City of Oceanside in exchange for tax credit on their existing farmland. In agreement and exchange, the donated land was to be
