New Water Logo Established

A nationwide campaign has begun to remove the game of golf from an often pictured villainous role within nature's water cycle. A logo has been adopted and will serve as a readily identifiable symbol of the beneficial role golf plays in the never ending challenge to equitably distribute a finite water supply. This campaign effort is spearheaded by a Research Task Force representing the national golf association community.

According to GCSAA Executive Director, James E. McLoughlin, (spokesman for the Research Task Force), "What we are trying to get across is that golf courses recycle water, whether it's by using effluent water or simply by filtering water from natural sources. The new water logo represents golf's initial effort to tell the public that it is not part of the water problem. It is part of the solution."
