

HOST SUPERINTENDENT - Corey Eastwood

left college in 1958 to work in the family excavating and grading business.

After becoming managing partner the business was transformed to pipeline and drainage construction. By 1970 it was specializing in turf drainage. In 1977 Corey decided to go into golf as a full time Superintendent.

Rod Kilcoyne at Diablo Creek allowed Corey to learn the trade while working for him. In 1979 Churn Creek Golf Course in Redding was his next stop as owner-superintendent to further his education.

In 1984 Corey came to Green Hills Country Club. Shortly after arriving Green Hills started a massive reconstruction program; this includes restoring original MacKenzie bunkers of which ten have been completed and four have been enlarged. The original creek on #5 has been restored and two new tees have been built. The #2 green has been completely rebuilt and #18 green has been restored to its original shape and contours. The putting green is now being rebuilt to accomodate clubhouse expansion. Extensive drainage has been started along with replacing the cart paths in concrete.

GREEN HILLS COUNTRY CLUB was designed by Dr. Allister MacKenzie just after doing Pasatiempo. It opened as the Union League Club in 1930 with a par 70 and 100 bunkers.
