

Noted Association Executive To Embark On New Course

James G. Prusa, GCSAA Associate Executive Director and Director of Education, has announced his intention to dedicate his full time to a new independent business venture beginning in 1987.

"While I'm very enthused about the future," said Prusa in his announcement, "I do deeply regret the fact that I'll no longer be working regularly with my colleagues at GCSAA.

"The opportunity for me to have worked with the Board, staff and committee members over the past five years has been a pleasurable honor. I hope I have contributed in some small way to putting in place the people and programs that have enabled the Association to enjoy the success it does today and the promising future that I believe clearly lies ahead."

GCSAA's President, Riley L. Stottner, CGCS, responded to Prusa's announcement with the following:

"Jim's departure will represent a loss, but his accomplishments represent lasting gains for him and the Association, in terms of the Education Program, the Certification Program, public relations efforts, financial management and much, much more. He'll be long remembered for those contributions."

Executive Director John M. Schilling added, "Jim's ideas, his entrepreneurial spirit, his stimulating approach and his perseverance will be missed at headquarters and throughout GCSAA. He has helped advance GCSAA significantly in just a few years, and we wish him well with his future business venture."

Prusa formalized his intention to depart with a letter of resignation on November 5, 1986. He is remaining on the GCSAA headquarters staff through the completion of the Phoenix Conference and Show, and plans his departure for early February 1987. The position of GCSAA Director of Education is open for application, and interested parties should direct inquiries to GCSAA Executive Director John M. Schilling prior to January 9, 1987.
