

By Emmy Moore Ministe

Berg Helps GROW the Game!

[L to R] Head Golf Professional Tom Wade and his boss GCSANC Member Tim Berg of Blue Rock Springs Golf Course, are all smiles since their 36-hole facility is now the Northeast Bay Chapter site for the Executive Women's Golf Association.

Class A Superintendent... and General Manager Tim Berg of Blue Rock Springs Golf Course (Vallejo, CA) is doing his part to help grow the game of golf. His facility is now home to one of the newest sites of the Executive Women's Golf Association (EWGA), the Northeast Bay Chapter which includes Alameda, Contra Costa, and Solano Counties.

Women business executives meet on a regular basis at Tim's facility to play the game of golf and learn more about the rules associated with the sport. Tim, his staff, and other industry leaders, have been asked to make presentations to the EWGA chapter members on a variety of golf related topics. The EWGA education program includes everything under sun, from etiquette and tips on proper ballmark repair to player development.

According to Berg, this EWGA chapter has kicked off with twenty-five members and is still growing. In an effort to bring new women to the game, a New Golfer Learning Series is also in place at Blue Rock Springs Golf Course. Congratulations to Tim Berg and his dedicated staff for volunteering their time to help others through the game of golf.

SUPS On The Job

Networking with a fellow GCSANC Member is a natural occurrence on the Monterey Peninsula. (Right) Tom Bevan, Golf Course Superintendent at Bayonet Golf Course (Seaside, CA) takes NCGA's Agronomist Mike McCullough on a tour of his facility.

They say a man's best friend is his dog, and GCSANC Member Chris Flynn at The Links at Spanish Bay (Pebble Beach, CA) will agree with that statement. Coby, a seven-month old American Bulldog joins Chris regularly at work on the nationally ranked course.