EPA questions Dursban’s safety

WASHINGTON — Despite years of use in the landscape industry, the insecticide Dursban (active ingredient: chlorpyrifos) has received low grades from the United States Environmental Protection Agency. The product’s reassessment, part of EPA’s first round of product reviews in its implementation of the Food Quality Protection Act, makes its reregistration vulnerable unless user groups speak up, warns Tim Maniscalo, government relations manager for Down AgroSciences, based in Indianapolis.

The 60-day public comment period for the risks and benefits of chlorpyrifos began in late September, and it is during this period that Dow Agro is encouraging grounds managers, lawn care operators and landscape contractors to speak out on the product’s benefits.
