A rare event

Events that don’t happen often are special. Why else would millions of people flock to the nearest telescope when Halley’s Comet passes by?

Floriade, the world horticultural exhibition in the Netherlands, may not exactly be an astrological phenomenon, but it’s just as anticipated, at least by Green Industry professionals, as it only occurs every 10 years. Next year’s event has been set for April 6 through October 20 in the district of Haarlemmermeer, and is expected to attract three million people from around the world.

Nurseries across the United States have joined together to create the AmeriGarden, an integrated display of plants, flowers, aquatics and ornamental fish showcasing the industry’s newest and best products.

Boots on fire

Poor John Morano. When two employees didn’t clock in one October morning two years ago, he knew he was in trouble. But, instead of packing it in, the owner of Morano Landscaping and Environmental Services in Sellersville, PA, hiked up his pants and got to work.

Morano never realized how much he could pack into his Dodge 1500 short bed: walk-behind leaf blowers, backpack and hand blowers, fuel cans, rakes, tarps and more. His 8x6 trailer was loaded with a 48-in. walk-behind aerator, spreader, chemicals and seed. From 7:30 a.m. until late afternoon, Morano managed to tackle eight properties ranging in size from 1/4 acre to 2 acres, and picked up two leads for the following season.

“I think my boots were on fire after that workout!” he says. “But, a couple of thousand dollars later, I didn’t mind the aches in my arms and back.”

Morano’s now got a new Landscape Management shirt, in case he wore out the shirt he was wearing.

Another golf shirt’s up for grabs for anyone who can tell us (in 200 words or less) a story about the toughest job they ever had. We’ll pick the best story, and you might even see it in print if you win. Entries are due by June 15, 2001.
