THE GOLD COAST PRESS: 1822-c 1930, AND THE ANGLO-AFRICAN PRESS: 1825-c 1930 - THE CHRONOLOGIES

by K.A.B. Jones-Quartey*

The history of the West African Press goes back to the very beginning of the 19th Century; the history of what we must call the Anglo-African Press - and in which, for convenience here, we include a number of American anti-slavery journals - started not much later. In English-speaking West Africa journalism began, under official auspices, in 1801 in Freetown, Sierra Leone, with the then Gold Coast Settlements, Lagos Colony, and Gambia following progressively later.¹ Meanwhile, in Britain, as far as the records show, periodicals directly concerned with West African affairs began publication in or about 1825.

The present writer has been engaged for some years in compiling comprehensive chronologies of the press in and of West Africa, that is, both the one established and managed in the various countries of the Guinea Coast itself, and the one established abroad but dealing with this area.² One of these chronologies is here published for the first time: that of the Gold Coast Press from 1822 to circa 1931; a second, the one including the early English and American periodicals concerned with Africa and with the Anti-Slavery movement, is being reproduced for the second time (on this occasion), as amended and augmented from its first public appearance in 1959.³

The object of the present publication is two-fold: first, to present to students and researchers in the field of West African political, economic, and social developments from the beginning of the 19th to the first third of the 20th Century, a vital source of information not hitherto sufficiently exploited; and secondly, to invite a response from those with knowledge of this field, a response in the form of possible further correction as well as augmentation of the material.

The chronologies here presented have been worked out separately. The Anglo-African Press list has been compiled from Cardinall's Bibliography of the Gold Coast (1931) and records at the library of the Royal Commonwealth Society and the Royal African Society, Northumberland Avenue, London, checked with the British Union-Catalogue of Periodicals,⁴ and further checked with other scattered sources both private and public.

Secondly, the chronology of the Gold Coast Press has in turn been compiled from the following: J. Magnus Sampson's pamphlet sketch, A Brief History of Gold Coast Journalism (1934, out of print, and extremely rare)⁵, the Colonial Office Blue Books covering the period, J.B. Anaman's almanacs and handbooks, records and collections⁶ at the Public Record Office, Chancery Lane, and the British Museum Newspaper Library at Colindale, north London; the Ghana National Archives, Accra, and its sub-branch at Cape Coast; the private collection of old newspapers and books at the Methodist Book Depot headquarters office, Cape Coast; the Balme Library and the library of the Institute of African Studies, of the University of Ghana, Legon; and the National Archives of Sierra Leone, the bulk of which is lodged at the University College of Sierra Leone in Freetown. Scattered references and odd collections of these papers may also be found in Copenhagen, The Hague, Basle, Bern, and the U.S.; also at the headquarters of the missionary societies in Britain and on the European Continent.

Chronologies of the Sierra Leone Press (the earliest of the West African English-language journals), and of Nigeria and the others, will be published, it is intended, at a later date. The Anglo-African and Gold Coast lists now follow:

4. Mr. R.J. Hoy, Deputy Librarian (1960) of the School of Oriental and African Studies, London, first called the author's attention to the Union-Catalogue.
5. Also inadequate, and not to be used as reference for the earliest Gold Coast newspapers, whose names, chronology, etc., are wrongly given by Sampson. A copy of this pamphlet is to be found at the Ghana National Archives, Cape Coast branch.

* The African Telegraph and Gold Coast Mirror was, apparently more so than most of the above, a child of both worlds. It was printed in London in technical perfection, but was sponsored in Accra, and was lavishly illustrated with pictures from the then Gold Coast while at the same time carrying a wide coverage of West African affairs. Samples can be found at the Cape Coast Archives.
