

*Tho' virtue, like the Sun whom clouds confine,
Or veild in night, may sometimes cease to shine,
Yet when at length its beames around are hurl'd,
It pleases, and instructs the duller world.*