The Order in New England.

There were two meetings arranged in Great Britain in the course of last week, on account of a political meeting, and to which both spoke at the same time and place, the other was held on the shore of a beautiful lake, near Granby, and within a few miles of the residence of Brother Harry Goddard, Past Master of the State Grange. It was one of the most interesting and gainful of the season—gives "clash-bang," 'a thousand串联', and 'the work in the necessary action to give it a wide circulation. Pickings by the Way, Sa. 16.

A word or two of our readers by way of acknowledgment for a pleasant and appropriate notice of our columns. Our friends think we ought to acknowledge such notices as most kindly and properly given. Our sister thinks that we ought to write more often, for the simple reason that so few of our readers have seen these notices. We are not very fond of either—would never make a minister in full capacity. Such as we have received we have taken to the satisfaction of our small readers. Another sister whose opinion has weight with us thinks we ought to condemn instead of praising the humble manner with which the table are supplied. This is none of our business. We have been pleased with the attention of the hands that fed and refueled to the work, and are confident that we shall be more than pleased with the service of the cars. We have some change that these people were friends, more so than we could have imagined. We have seen these ears in the shops and upon the trains. The choice lands of the G. R. & I. R. is occupied by the actual settler. The best way to the place of meeting, where there is room for all, is to proceed north, and then to the north ferry,

BRO. PARMELEE'S large farm is upon the northern extremity of the peninsula, from which, its elevation, may be said to be a prominent feature. Here he has a high point that can you look over the top of the highest tree on the peninsula, and see the shore of the bay below, and see the bay and the point upon the opposite shore.

Our sisters were taken to "The Lookout," one of the highest points, from where we could be seen approaching the steamer, which was passing through the mouth of Torch River; then north up the river to Torch Lake; then up Torch Lake 10 miles to the mouth of Peninsula. So clear are the waters of these lakes that you can see the bottom of them, especially in the rivers and narrows, that you can be seen as plainly as when you stand over a pool in a creek, and look down through the water, even those that are among the trees, and the sandbanks, and the little islands, all of which you can see.

The settlements upon the banks are few and far between, in most places in granit's original-basalt—tall-gum forms the bank, while the lower grows along the shore of the waters.
The Shilohsville Convention

The Shilohsville County Convention, held in the town of Shilohsville, Ohio, on the 16th and 18th of this month, was attended by a large number of farmers and agriculturalists. The convention was attended by a large number of farmers and agriculturalists. The convention was well organized and included a variety of topics related to agriculture, economics, and rural development.

The convention began with a keynote address by Mr. J. R. Ramsdell, who emphasized the importance of cooperation among farmers and the need for increased research and education in the field of agriculture. Mr. Ramsdell also called for a greater focus on sustainable practices and the importance of protecting the environment.

The convention featured several workshops and panel discussions on a range of topics, including crop production, livestock management, and rural development initiatives. A highlight of the convention was a presentation by Mr. W. E. Willoughby, who discussed the benefits of cooperatives in the agricultural sector. Mr. Willoughby argued that cooperatives could help farmers access better prices and markets, while also providing support for research and development.

The convention concluded with a closing address by Mr. E. G. Willoughby, who thanked all those who had attended and emphasized the importance of continued collaboration and innovation in the agricultural sector. The convention provided a valuable opportunity for farmers and agriculturalists to exchange ideas and strategies, and to work towards a more sustainable and prosperous rural future.

The Shilohsville County Convention was well received, and it is hoped that the recommendations and initiatives discussed at the convention will be taken up by local and state authorities to support the needs of farmers and the rural community. The next convention is planned for next year and will continue to build on the success of this year's event.
From the Fifth District, we give the answer of the candidates entirely.

Mr. Secretary—In reply to the Hon. [Signed].

I am well pleased to have this opportunity of expressing to you the sentiments of the people of the Sixth District: that in all full sympathy with those whose interests concern us, because I am accorded with you in the principles of the American system of government, and being a candidate for an office having a direct bearing on the interests of the people of your county. Truly yours,

Very respectfully,

W. E. Sexton—My Dear Sir: Your circular of the 25th asking me several questions that were asked me by the working people and their interest as against the monopolies and combinations of the rich and powerful, is received with pleasure, and I am ready to aid in any legislation looking toward the end.

Very Respectfully,

W. G. Wray.

From the Seventh District we have but one answer, that of John J. Wadsworth.

In answer to the request of the Rochester Union, I beg to say that I am a farmer and a position in the public service that would enable me to do good work for the best interests of the people.

Very respectfully,

J. H. Boardman.

Our Candidates for Governor.

GRANGE DESK.

The executive committee of the Grange have been deeply interested in the views of the candidates for public office, and in their efforts to educate the public on the great issues of the times. The names of our candidates for the several offices have been published in a recent edition of the Grange Desks, and the committee hope that the public will make their votes sincerely known on the first day of the fair.

We wish to express our appreciation of the efforts of the candidates for public office, and to extend to them our hearty wishes for success in the public service. We are confident that the people of the State will give to those who are best fitted for the positions to which they aspire, and that the Grange will continue to play an important part in the political affairs of the State.

GRANGE EXHIBITION.

The Grange exhibition at the fair was opened on Tuesday, October 5th, with a grand display of the products of the Grange and the agricultural interests of the State. The exhibit was well attended, and the visitors were impressed with the progress that has been made in the agricultural and industrial fields.

The exhibit included a wide variety of products, including fruits, vegetables, grains, and livestock. The exhibit was arranged in a manner that made it easy for visitors to see the different exhibits, and the visitors were impressed with the quality and variety of the products on display.
