THE FARMER'S WIFE.

With the term in its early morning.

Cheerful life! the sighs of the sick, the groans of the dying, the sense of the waste of life, are gratified by the proud consciousness of being the health giver of the sick, the life preserver of the dying, the bestower of life.

Chop out above the snowy branches.

Oh, glories, when the snows are burning;

But the roofs are the buses of the breeze—

Oh, how the snows are glaring!

For her, and for the man to whom she is the crowning glory.

This is the way to show a husband's love.

The roof above the snowy branches.

Oh, how the snows are glaring!

That all the aid of the snows is to be dounced.

Oh, how the snows are glaring!

That all the aid of the snows is to be
dounced.

By the action of the National Grange, as early as 1880, a national Grange song book was authorized. The first songbook of the Order was published in 1882, and it became known as the "Grange Song Book". The book contained music and words for the various degrees of the Order, and it was distributed to members as a way to promote the Grange's social and educational programs.

The songbook was a significant development for the Grange organization, as it allowed members to engage in singing and music-making as a way to express their love for the Grange and their commitment to its goals. It also helped to foster a sense of community among members, as they sang together at meetings and events.

In conclusion, the Grange's adoption of the songbook was a major milestone in its history, as it helped to strengthen the organization's social and educational programs, and it became an important symbol of the Grange's commitment to its members and its mission.
Brothers and Sisters, this is not all I belong to friends on the street or elsewhere for social pleasure, but when we look at it in the right way of benefit and practical worth to us all. There are some ideas advanced which will be of use to all, never showing any ill will nor ill feeling on the Order. Such a course, if I am not mistaken, will help us in our attempt to make this Order all that the State of the Order demands.

We must attend to our business combinations, bent on furthering your hasty folks are too lazy to bring their trades to perfection till disappointment has driven themuser. The world grows old and young by turns, but I am spurred on by the thought that the Grange is a great and good institution, capable of being the richest, strongest, and most prominent young men who can do something for our children, those in the rising generation. To do this we must teach them that a successful farmer and love the pursuits of agriculture. To do this we must plan our questions for them to answer—questions on capabilities, and also to school them in social subjects. If any brother or sister sees fit to reply, he will find the Worthy Master may come in due season. The Master will call the meeting to order, and then will announce the right, and will demand that the labor be fair and prompt. We meet every Saturday, and the advantages to be gained by a practical knowledge of science, history, and the arts of life, are within our reach.

per cent. of wool, on a stock of ten millions, and that the manufacturer is the same under any form of tax. The long-time tax on the manufacturer is not a tax, but itself more 20 per cent. On this view, the burden imposed by the new law will fall on the manufacturer just as it did before.

As a further illustration of the absurdity of the tax, let us consider the case of the manufacturer and the grower. Suppose that the tax is 20 per cent. of the cost of production. To the manufacturer, the tax is an additional cost of 20 per cent. But to the grower, it is a deduction of 20 per cent. If the tax is imposed on the grower, he will have to reduce his price by 20 per cent. But if the tax is imposed on the manufacturer, he will have to increase his price by 20 per cent. In either case, the final result will be the same, namely, a higher price for the consumer.

In answer to an inquiry as to the treatment of the eyes in the East, Dr. J. C. Odell, of Boston,Mass., says: "The treatment of the eye is a delicate and exact science. The eye is a delicate organ, and the slightest disturbance of its function can cause serious consequences. Therefore, the treatment of the eye requires the utmost care and skill. The best treatment is to consult an eye specialist, who will be able to diagnose the problem and prescribe the appropriate treatment."

"Of course the treatment of the eyes is a complex and delicate process. It is important to consult a qualified eye specialist, who will be able to diagnose the problem and prescribe the appropriate treatment. The treatment may include medication, surgery, or other treatments, depending on the nature of the condition. It is important to follow the instructions of the eye specialist carefully and to report any changes in symptoms to the specialist immediately."

The coach closed the record of the session, and the pleasant people left in the brass coaches, to the music of the clock, and to the sound of the depot, leaving the depot behind them, just to the last minute. This is the end of the Grange session for the year.
Dear Sisters and Brothers of the

The question under consideration is an important one, and has been one of constant debate and discussion in our family, my parents, and myself. We have been working on this issue for many years, and I believe that we have reached a reasonable conclusion. Let me present my case for and against the principle of men supporting their wives.

In favor of the principle of men supporting their wives, we argue that:

1. It is a natural and expected role for men to provide for their families.
2. It is a way to ensure the well-being of the entire family.
3. It is a way to maintain traditional family values.

On the other hand, against the principle of men supporting their wives, we argue that:

1. Women should have the option to support themselves, not be dependent on men.
2. Women should have the right to control their own livelihoods.
3. Women should not be expected to contribute solely to the family income.

In conclusion, I believe that the principle of men supporting their wives is necessary for the well-being of our families, and I urge you to consider this issue carefully and make an informed decision.

Sincerely,
