THE FARMER'S DEEM, AND WHAT CAME OF IT.

BY W. ST. HOLLAND.

[From the New York World.]

[New ed.]

[The Grange Visitor is a monthly magazine for farmers, with articles on agriculture, farm management, and rural life.]

[The text includes a story about a farmer named Thomas J. Cobb, living in Adrian, Lenawee County, Michigan, and his experiences with wool.]

[The story describes the farmer's concerns about the quality of wool, the challenges of finding the best customers, and the importance of maintaining a good reputation in the wool trade.]

[The farmer's journey to bring his wool to market is detailed, along with his struggles to find buyers who will pay a fair price.]

[The article concludes with the farmer's reflections on the importance of the wool trade to the local economy and the challenges of maintaining a successful farm business.]

The New York Grange has been supplying the anti-Cooking papers in New York. This is what it is called. It is a system of cooking, which is known as the "New York System," and it is said to be the best in the country. It is based on the principle that the dishes are cooked in a certain way, not only to make them delicious, but also to make them wholesome and nutritious. It is not surprising, therefore, that the New York Grange has been able to supply the anti-Cooking papers with a steady stream of wholesome and nutritious dishes, which are sure to be appreciated by all who are interested in good cooking.

The newspaper "The Grange Visitor" from July 1, 1881, contains articles on various topics such as health, business, and news. A notable article is about the dangers of poisonous papers and how they can affect the health of those who work with them. The newspaper also includes news from various parts of the United States, discussing the growth of railroads, school attendance, and other economic and social issues of the time. The language is typical of late 19th-century American press, with a focus on local news and community affairs. The layout is typical of a newspaper of that era, with columns of text and occasional advertisements. of the two words "hospital" and "asylum" there is a distinctive difference in the mean-ages of the two words. The primary purpose of the one is to preserve life, the other is to destroy it.

Asylums are for incurable cases, apparently without remedy. We think this machine will go condemned to Every child in the State should be educated in such a manner as to be able to live

THE CARE OF THE INIANGE—ITS RELATION TO Schools. The aim of the schools should be to have the children learn to think and to be able to think independently. To do this, they must be taught to read and write, and to understand and use language.

There are many justifications for the idea that the care of the insane is the primary and most important work of the State. The insane are the most helpless and the most unfortunate people in the world. They are the ones who need the most sympathy and the most care. The State has a duty to provide for their well-being, and it is the duty of the schools to help in this work.

The care of the insane is also a matter of public safety. The insane are often a nuisance and a danger to the public. They are often a source of trouble and a nuisance to others. The schools have a duty to help in the care of the insane and to prevent them from doing harm to others.

The care of the insane is also a matter of public zeal. The insane are often a nuisance and a burden to the public. They are often a source of trouble and a nuisance to others. The schools have a duty to help in the care of the insane
and to prevent them from doing harm to others.
