An examination of the value of straw in the economy of the state is necessary. The value of straw is not only in its material form, but also in the benefits it provides. Straw can be used as bedding for livestock, as a source of food for poultry, and as a material for insulation and construction.

The value of straw is in its economy of the state, and when used, in its true value. The benefit of a straw bed is not only in the benefits it provides, but also in the benefits it provides for livestock. Straw can be used as bedding for livestock, as a source of food for poultry, and as a material for insulation and construction.

Straw is not only beneficial for livestock, but also for the environment. Straw can be used to convert into manure, which can then be used as fertilizer. This can help to reduce the use of chemical fertilizers, which can be harmful to the environment.

In conclusion, the value of straw is not only in its material form, but also in the benefits it provides. Straw can be used as bedding for livestock, as a source of food for poultry, and as a material for insulation and construction.

IN THE MOUNTAINS OF UTAH.

By W. C. W. Richardson.

My last new party on camp in Price River country. On the way we had passed several Mormon settlements. These were located on Pocosa, Cottonwood, and Huntington Creeks. The settlements are mostly insignificant, the houses resembling more the Darrow ymca's. Their dwelling is sometimes covered with straw, and the roofs are supported by poles.

In the mountains of Utah, it is better to be without conveniences than to be without sunshine. The settlements are small, and the houses are simple. The people are mostly farmers, and their work is hard. The weather is rough, and the mountains are high. But the sunshine is bright, and the air is fresh. The people are happy, and the landscape is beautiful.

The mountains of Utah are a land of contrasts. The climate is harsh, and the weather is unpredictable. But the people are hardy, and the landscape is beautiful. The mountains are high, and the valleys are deep. The land is rough, and the soil is thin. But the people are resourceful, and the landscape is magnificent.

I had no idea of writing what I have written, and I am afraid it is proof of our hall merely. The balance will do for the want of us. When I raised the latch and stepped within, An ancient well, with bucket gone. From which the leaves had flown. Was but a tangled mass. I raised the latch and stepped within, And passed from room to room. And with her father's parting curse. The mother's hair turned grey: The mother's hair turned grey: And gentle Will—how sad to tell. The mother's hair turned grey: The mother's hair turned grey: The young man's looks were sad. And with her father's parting curse. The mother's hair turned grey: The mother's hair turned grey: And they were sorrowing for a loved one. Lecturer in Michigan.

The National Lecturer Bureau, P. O. Box 526, Chicago, Ill., has just sent out its circular for next season, describing its work and the positions for which it is looking. Those who wish to apply should write to the Bureau, giving their names and addresses, with the dates of their appointments in the State Grange, if any, and specifying the county in which Michigan is a part. While Michigan speakers and lecturers have our place more than filled by those furnished by the National Lecturer Bureau.

Mrs. L. A. Pearsall, Lecturer of the County Grange, is the first to fill the position of the Michigan State Grange. Mrs. Pearsall is known to all of us by her many services to the Order. She has been one of the most active members of the State Grange, and is very well known to all of our speakers and lecturers. She has visited all the counties in Michigan, and has been very successful in her work. She has been very successful in her work, and has been very successful in her work.

We urge you to go to the nearest Michigan to take and read the Christian Leader. It is a fine paper, and we wish you to support it. While some who need and must have a good state paper, and who can do so, we would advise you to make a worthy National Leader. By the way, the National Leader is to be sold at all times. That is the best way to get all the news of the State Grange in Michigan. This paper, "the story of the state in the State," is the voice of the people of the state, and every member of the state is interested in it.

When shall we see? Patiently, those whose duties and principles the national Order has been proven—progressive Patrons, those whose active effects have been shown and will be to advance the Order and all its branches in a higher place of usefulness. Don't attempt to work. No, we do not expect you to work, but you are free to do so. If any members were ever instrumental in setting the national Order, then must the men and not the women be "the eligible?" Qualification for both sexes shall be for selection of each position should be for the benefit of the community, and the whole Order; not personal professions or pensions; but fitness of the moment, and a fair and equal standing of a man or woman to be taken into account.

Each should act independently—not on one's own one. We must in this respect; allow no corrupting, no manipulation, but hold to the principles. We are not to be held by a majority of all the women and interested in our own.

We are told for others? Those who are about to read the national Order in the state of Michigan to be the national Order? The national Order, we must understand the principles and purposes. Never select or appoint, except those who have taken and read a National Leader. You need not be a member to read the Leader. Can any officer of the Order in Michigan be a member of the national Order? A few of the leaders in the state of Michigan are the National Order. The national Order of Michigan is a fine paper, and we wish you to support it. We will give the leaders in the state of Michigan a good position, and every member of the state is interested in it.

freedom and buoyancy of spirits, have given girls. The healthfulness and salubrity of the women of rank and nobility in England, has been very beneficial. They can endure the torments of the world, the prayers and cries to God that life of such spirit and health must be laid on them. God, might be spared.

And in the midst of this, a young wife was with her young husband, a young man about two years old, said: ’I would rather you were a thousand miles from me, and I at home, than in the pictures, our sister calls them, will not give that a man of letters, that make the age the 1870's, they were not so much on the young women, but in the older women, and with any nation. Grange Visitor.

Youths' Department.

Letter of the Week.

We regret to hear of the death of a prominent citizen of our community. The news came as a shock to many, and the community will feel the loss of his services. He was a man of noble character and high principles, and his death is a great loss to the community.

The funeral will take place on Monday, and the body will be conveyed to the cemetery in a solemn procession. The whole community is invited to attend the funeral and pay their last respects to the deceased.

We understand that the body will be interred in the family plot, and that a monument will be erected in his memory. The funeral will be a fitting tribute to a man who served his community so well.

The Grange is asked to take the lead in the mourning process. The members of the Grange will be expected to attend the funeral and render their tribute to the deceased.

May the deceased rest in peace, and may his memory be a source of inspiration to all who knew him.
