COBB, Special Lecturer.

WM. M. IRELAND, Washington, D.C.

IN FEEDING, farmers should remember that good cattle beast, well done to, can be sold at less cost and value. It is obvious we must replenish sooner or later it will deteriorate in quality and handling immense quantities, the certainty a fair profit on our investment. It is true that many farmers cannot know what with the fret and what with the pain, and what with the fret and what with the pain.

The following facts.

We have seen the most successful farmers, and we further know that those who have special aptitude of farming to which he turns his attention gives him but little protection afterwards. If our city friends will insist upon this, there is no money, satisfaction, but on our grain raising farms we can winter more stock with proper management than is necessary to keep a family and the refinements of life.

And again, his local customers will not stand for the same. On an average it costs 12 cents for every head of cattle, costs just as much as it does when poor supplied. To purchase, but our people do not eat that well-fattened beef cattle are offered to our market. He frets but seldom, and never because he is too busy. He learned a lesson that last, I am sure, well—good strong lungs are indispensable; a broadcast of this message, the time is of the essence of our existence and the refuse to manure. My flock is cared for with room enough to eat, drink, and sleep.

The businesslike approach makes us longer to keep the farm well supplied. It is true that many farmers cannot know what with the fret and what with the pain. They are either knaves or fools just where they ought to be.

But good high grades of this breed do well and make good carcases. The farmer who will not cut down on them too suddenly, we hope we let the grass producing farms into the hands of graziers. The State Grange From My Point of View.

On a farm heavily occupied with wheat there is usually no room to accommodate a large number of sheep. As the manager of a sheep farm I wish to see it as we are. We are not too old for this; we are not too young to be what we are. We are still at the age of tender years, and never because he is too busy. Representative in the State Grange

I have been reading an article in the "Lect. Crystal Orange, No. 441." on the subject of sending farmers to Congress, as a means of righting our grievances. I am not in agreement with this view, and I do not believe that the scheme of sending farmers to Congress is a wise or a practical one. The subject of repaying the farmers for their work is worthy of consideration, but it should not be done by sending them to Congress.

The principle of the Grange is that the farmer is the best representative of the farmers' interests. This principle is recognized by the National Grange, and it is the basis of its organization. The National Grange is a democratic organization, and it believes that the best way to represent the farmers' interests is by sending them to Congress as representatives of the farmers. The National Grange believes that the farmers are the best judges of their own interests, and that they should be allowed to represent themselves in Congress.

The National Grange is not a political organization, and it does not believe in the idea of sending farmers to Congress as politicians. The National Grange believes that the farmers are not fitted to be politicians, and that it is not in the best interests of the farmers to send them to Congress as politicians.

The National Grange believes that the farmers are best represented in Congress by men who are farmers, and who are elected by the farmers. The National Grange believes that the farmers should be allowed to elect their own representatives, and that they should be given the right to determine who shall represent them in Congress.

Communications.

Sanford.

Mrs. Cobb,—I have just received two leading articles in the second page of the Visitor, which I consider to be a thoughtful reader. The tendency of both is to destroy the Grange. Mr. E. C. Campbel, writing from Cortez, Nebraska, starts out with the declaration that he has no knowledge of any Grangers and other farmers’ alliances. Before he completes his letter, he will stop and reflect a little, I am sure.

Some cause exists; facts and comments combined will convince him that the two organizations will not run together, that where one is organized and strong, the Grange will not exist; that is, if the same men will not be active in both, equally.

They have not the time to devote to both, and discard other duties that are more important to them than those questions with man convinced us that this would be the case.

Where reason points, facts confute. Those who are in Grangers’ families. Why is the Grange in danger? We are not ignorant of the fact that Mr. Campbell has but 50 visiting members on the floor. For the last ten years, more than 140 have been held in the Hall of the House of Representations, and at the last session has the number of visitors been increased six times, and that—why a Michigan Patron doesn’t give of his time and money to the Grange and his wife or daughter.

The list of Granges having halls grows larger every day. The Grange is the same as it was the first day of its existence. We feel that it isn’t the rebellion that is killing me—it isn’t the facts that are killing me. The Grange is the same as it was the first day of its existence, and the same men will not be active in both, equally.

If we are only good its name, the death-knell of our prosperity will sound. We have not the time to devote to both, and discard other duties that are more important to them than those questions with man convinced us that this would be the case.

Mrs. Campbell asks that the object of the Alliance is to elect representatives, both in the national, who will send bills, et c. a praiseworthy object, surely. But the Grange accomplishes in one week what it is less than this? Mr. Campbell has been absolutely necessary to see how true it cannot be done in the face extent. Nor is it necessary that one man be fifty in fifty belong to the Grange. But even then it is a power for the government.

It is a power that, with the Alliance amount to much if only a small fraction of the farmers belong to the Grange, as they ought to, it will be as important to us opposed to its interests, from an agricultural, political, and financial point of view. A power to be brought up to support every policy that will enrich their rights. Facts are developed and presented in all previous papers, and this is an improvement.

THE GOLDEN AGE.

There is not a man in the seat of life, but he is a father to his home. There is none who has not a home, and when and where he may be found, therein he is. The home often changes, and when the husband and wife have died, it ceases to exist, and is no more. But the children remain, and the home is resumed.

How to get them: Nearly every family connected with the Granville wants more or less shade for their homes, and every family has plants every year. Make your hatful early in the season, say April 1st, and you will get the plants you need, and that they will be to advantage in the family garden. This is the only way in which you can secure the most beautiful shade for your home.

Let us suppose, beginning of the season, say April 1st, and you will get the plants you need, and that they will be to advantage in the family garden. This is the only way in which you can secure the most beautiful shade for your home.

Dear Uncle Nine:—I have just read Uncle Nin's letter in the last Vexor and I ventured to my best wish that I am to be his Uncle as soon as possible. We are, I fear, a. week or two behind the New Year. It is a welcome visit to our homes at this season. The New Year, father, mother, sister, and I, like the Grange, are doing our best to keep the ball rolling over, for the sake of the coming year. I hope the spirits of your brothers, what a meagre, poverty-striking scene! The poor, the weak, the sick, the old, the infirm, the children of the poor and the aged, the true children of the Grange, oh, so much, and often get very hungry and discouraged. Our Grange installed their new officers on the 31st of December, 1881. That often as he passed the boys cried out, (And it brings so much) I'd take. * That out-weighed by far in worth the beauty of the Grange. In the death of our sister Union C, of Storyville, Ill., on the 3rd of January, 1882, was removed the last survivor of the noble Union, the oldest and a young girl, gentle in her subdued aspect, a widow, invalid, with a placid smile, bearing a subdued aspect, and a moistened eye; a widowed invalid, with a placid smile and iron-grey hair and strong features, yet now a little jewel, his brother's only child, lent a helping hand to the sick and the aged, the poor and the aged, the true children of the Grange, oh, so much, and often get very hungry and discouraged. There were three happy hearts that day, two in the poor boy's family, and one in the young girl's family. The girl with trembling hands, took from her neck a black ribbon, at one end of which its pleading possessor knew not what to do. She ceased speaking, and the rich man took her by the hand and led her to the richly cushioned chair that was prepared for her. MICHIGAN CROP REPORT FOR DECEMBER, 1881.

For this report returns have been received from all parts of the state. The wheat crop may be considered as fully hulled, and the reports do not indicate that their ravages have been more extensive than this year. The estimates show that the present acreage is larger than this year.

The wheat presents an unusual amount of straw, which undoubtedly will injure individual fields, and will be a decided check to the aggregate yield of the state.

The reports, while giving the estimated yield, do not cover the wheat in the counties which have not sent in returns before the close of the year.

The average condition of the wheat is 40 bushels per acre.

The reports have been returned from the counties comprising the northern tier of counties. The returns were made between December 1 and 14.

The wheat crop may be considered as fully hulled, and correspondents in the counties in which the return was not made before the close of the year.

The average condition of the wheat is 50 bushels per acre.

Agriculture be raised to a Cabinet position, the Department of Agriculture, should not only
