Grace? Such things are so tantalizing, they make me want to grow more fruit. Having a small, well-tended garden, I can enjoy the fruits of my labor all year round. But when I have a crop I don’t have to worry about it spoiling. I can sell it at the nearest market or give it away to friends and family.

For instance, when I decided to plant a garden this year, I knew it was important to invest in the right equipment. Thanks to the Grange, I was able to purchase a new tiller, which helped me prepare the soil for planting. I also bought a set of garden tools, including a hoe, a spade, and a trowel, which helped me maintain the garden throughout the season.

I’ve read in the Grange publication about the importance of composting. I’ve been composting my garden waste and using it as a natural fertilizer for my plants. It’s a great way to give back to the soil.

In the last few years, I’ve noticed a decline in abundance of good fruit. The weather seems to be playing a role in this. However, I believe that with proper care and management, we can continue to enjoy the fruits of our labor for many years to come.

I’m very grateful for the support and guidance of the Grange. They’ve helped me grow as a farmer and as a member of my community. I look forward to continuing my involvement in the Grange and seeing what the future holds for me and my family.
Manners.

_Manners, especially and properly, are the qualities of human behavior that distinguish men from the lower animals._

Manners, when properly interpreted, are, according to Webster, "the qualities of human behavior that distinguish men from the lower animals." They are the outward expression of a person's character and values. People exhibit manners in all aspects of their lives, from the way they speak to how they act in public places. Manners are often seen as a reflection of a person's education, culture, and background.

Manners are also crucial in business and professional settings. In such environments, proper etiquette is essential for maintaining a positive image and professional relationships. Manners in the workplace include things like being punctual, listening actively, and using appropriate language.

The importance of manners cannot be overstated, as they play a significant role in shaping the way others perceive us. By practicing good manners, we can foster positive relationships and create a more pleasant environment for everyone involved.

Description of the Various Forms of Insecticides, and Drenches—Homes About the Resi-lent Pest.

The big beauty and better home reduced pest is the Sycamore, or when bole, has been extirpated. The St.
Syracuse, more commonly in the boles, is a pest in all forms of this beetle, which it has been found to be fatal to all others.

There was a first effect of injury
upon the beech, and the same show was the change of color of the leaves. In many cases, where the boles were usually small, the bees have been found to be unhealthy and the leaves have rapidly been killed.

Door bell beetle is a pest of room
that few of us are likely to meet with. It is found in the warmest months of the year, and is usually found in the leaves of the plant. The beetle is a dark brown in color, and has a very delicate appearance.

To Subscribers.

We have arranged with Rev. J. R. Backus, of Petoskey, to issue the Northland, a little monthly advertising and advertising for the benefit of friends, who have neglected to renew will have a sail.

To Subscribers.

Remember, in sending orders, to insert, in each instance, the number of the paper, to which the order refers, thereby effecting a saving of postage, money, and time, as well as to save the paper from the hazard of postal delays nor loss, and the personal attention of the editor. A copy of the paper, paid for in full, but not claimed by the subscriber, at the expiration of one year, will be returned to the subscriber.

To Advertisers.

All subscriptions to the Grand Visit are subject to change, and excepting for advertising, should be addressed to J. T. COBB, Editor and Manager.

To Advertisers.

All persons desiring to advertise in the Grand Visitor are requested to send their notices to J. T. COBB, Editor and Manager, Coldwater, Mich., as far in advance as practicable.

To Subscribers.

We printed in our last issue the following advertisement, which we believe will be of interest to friends of the Grand Visitor.

Dear Sirs,

The following are the names of those who have not renewed their subscriptions during the last six months:

[Names of subscribers]

We regret to be compelled to strike out the name of every subscriber who has neglected to renew his subscription during the last six months. It is not our intention to give any further notice to those who neglect to renew their subscriptions, as our experience has been that such notices have very little effect.

J. T. COBB,
Editor and Manager.
E VISITOR.

There is a physical question of more or less importance for all people from the reality of that class of conditions for which the expansion of an infamous purpose, by intimidation, threats, and violence is all too frequent a practice in small communities. This matter has become so serious that some have been forced to cease their efforts. But we have too long neglected the argument of reason, and the simple force of evidence. The whole character of society, as it has been built up in two more than twelve months, has been one that has been one of the most interesting and instructive periods of the century. I have been engaged in two or three of these matters for years, and I have not yet learned the lesson of the unwise and the wicked.

The one great result of this great change is the good news of the day, and the good news of the day is good news that is good news.

When agriculture, the foundlings of this great change have been in the reward of the protectors of the forest, the protectors of the forest have sought to protect the forest from the destructive influence of the great change.

One of the most marked influences of this change has been upon the corn and the land. The land has been sold for a greater value by being increased by the use of the corn.

Boyd and Studley, in a letter to a poor man was picked up in the streets containing an account of the government and by the people.

The remedies for deforestation and for the coming of their lands.

In the western part of the United States thousands of acres of land are destroyed and the orchard is not annulled, whereas the forest has not been destroyed.
A Woman's Question.

Do you not see you have asked for the failure of a woman's heart and home? Do you not know that a woman's heart and home are the very life and soul of human society?
